EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

It is not yet known in what State General Crook will be a candidate for the Presidency.

Is the ability of an attorney to be measured by the length of an argument he can make?

The Star Route jurors and Dukes' dozen should be locked up in a cell together. Such kindred spirits would enjoy each others society.

Mrs. Scoville does not want to bear her husband's name any longer, but at the same time develops insuperable objections to bearing her maiden name.

The enemies of John L. Sullivan, the bruiser, are asserting that he abuses his wife. That lady says it is not true and we believe she is correct.

Let the people remember and not forget that the present extra session was caused by the dilatoriness of the Democratic House in agreeing upon the apportionment bills, and that the vast expense which it entails should be charged to the Democratic account.

The New York Sun recently attempted to criticise the Y. M. C. A. meeting with little success, however. Attacks from a journal of the questionable character of the Sun are calculated to aid rather than injure.

Nearly five millions of dollars of the public debt were paid off during the month of May. This is a little better than for the previous month, although it falls much under the amounts paid off during the earlier months of the year. The entire amount of the public debt liquidated since June, 1882, is nearly one hundred and twenty millions, or an average of about ten millions per month.

The predominant sentiment in New York city is no longer for free trade. The immense importance of the domestic industries in that city and suburbs having been ascertained by two successive national censuses, the wise men of Gotham are no longso anxious for free trade as they were.

At a meeting of the new Irish-American National League, a Catholic clergyman eloquently called attention to the necessity of warmly supporting the American protective policy as the most effective weapon against English domination. The seed that has been sown is bringing forth good fruit, and an anti-protectionist Irish-American will soon be a rarity anywhere in the United States.

There are few men living whom the Queen of England has delighted to honor as Lord Dufferin, who is now to wear the decoration of the Order of the Garter and thus subscribe to his name the initials K. G. in addition to the three sets—K. P., G. C. M. G. and K. C. B.—with which he has already been honored. He started in life as a simple Irish Baron, but obtained a peerage of the United Kingdom at the age of 23. Since 1850 he has received no less than seventeen distinct titles—more than one every other year.

Half a century ago a Mr. Walden, of Portland, Me., had four strangely assorted pets—a parrot, a monkey, a tame fox and a New-foundland puppy. The parrot has seen his companions one after the other go the way of all flesh, and now, at the age of sixty years, is still one of the most important members of Lieutenant George Waldon's family. Contemplation of the vicisitudes of life has subdued the loquacity which was formerly the parrot's chief failing, and the bird is now, to all appearances, one of the most profound thinkers in the State of Maine.

An Extraordinary Boomerang.

The extraordinary session of the Legislature, which the Administration launched into space, has already begun to assume the properties of a boomerang. The concurrent resolution adopted to adjourn until June 19, originated in the House, and was caused by the votes of Democrats, and by the influence of those Democrats who are recognized as supporters of the Administration. The Administration thus becomes responsible for calling the session and for the expense of the pay of the members, which will run on during the recess. The session starts out with a dead loss to the State of an amount equal to nearly two weeks' pay to every member of the House and Senate, or nearly $50,000. The members go home to attend to private business. The business of the State and the subject of apportionment will not receive the slightest attention from the Legislature during these twelve days during which the salary bills will be accumulating.

It is true the Senate concurred in the resolutions to take the recess, but the House led the way to the adjournment, and it was the party which is in a majority in the House and which also possesses the executive branch of the State Government, that is responsible for the extra session. The Senate members of the conference committee on apportionment had receded a step from the original position of the Senate, but the House members of the commitee would not yield a point from the position of the House. The failure of the apportionment might have been prevented, but for the failure the House and the Democratic party are responsible. Governor Pattison is authority for saying that the failure to make the apportionment was the cause of the extra session.

Both Houses have also passed a resolution to begin the work of apportionment anew, and in this the extra session is likely to exhibit to Governor Pattison another of its boomerang features. The House has displayed little capacity for expediting business. It nearly caused the failure of the General Appropriation bill by its slowness and lack of business sense. The ability of Speaker Faunce, McDowell Sharpe and a few other members is almost lost sight of in the incapacity of the crowd of incompetents. The House will enter heavily handicapped the coming race with the Senate. The characteristics of the two Houses make it probable that the Senate will be ready with an apportionment plan while the members of the House are quarreling among themselves and refusing to agree upon any plan at all. Besides having to shoulder the responsibility of an extra session and of the recess, the House is likely to cause the prolonging of the session. The troubles of the Governor arising from the House of Representatives are not yet ended.—Philadelphia Press.

A Son's Revenge.

In Uniontown some months ago a murderer was allowed to go free by a shameless jury who were either bribed or influenced by political bigotry and prejudice. With a fatality which seems to follow all men who do wrong, this murderer and destroyer of the peace of homes determined to live in Uniontown, the scene of his wickedness and triumph, and to-day murder is again present in that community because the hangman was absent last January. Goaded by sense of his wrongs in the murder of his father and the dishonor of his sister, the tantalizing presence of his dead father's slayer and the seducer of his sister so worked upon the mind of young Nutt that the checks and guards of daily life were worn away, and blood has followed blood and murder murder. The pistol of the assassin seeks to right a great wrong and blood stains the streets in which a few short months ago justice looked upon innocent blood and passed by on the other side. But now the avenger has come and young Nutt has acted where the law has failed. Much as we may sympathize with young Nutt we cannot but feel that it is a great pity that justice failed in her duty last January. Two wrongs can never make a right, however, therefore we cannot justify the shooting of Dukes, although a more cowardly murderer than he showed himself to be it would be hard to find. The almost universal sentiment in this community is "Served him right," and so it seems from our dispatches is the sentiment all over the country. Good men, upon second thought, will deplore and perphaps condemn the act and wish the boy could have risen to that higher moral plane which would have ignored the existence of the assassin on earth, but those who would have the penalty of the law executed upon him will be well nigh devoid of human sympathy. That he has technically committed murder is true, but it is equally beyond question, that no jury can be found in the country to convict him of that crime. Even Fayette county can not produce a jury to condemn his act, unless it should be the jury which acquitted Dukes. It is doubtful whether even that remarkable body could be induced to assume the responsibility of convicting the avenger of his father, and be the instrument of that justice which the law failed to administer.

What Pennsylvania justice will do with him remains to be seen. It can neither convict nor acquit him without subjecting the State to new disgrace.

The Cause of It.

Several leading anti-protection writers have recently cited the annual report of the Iron and Steel Association and attempted to torture its statements into confirmation of their false statements ascribing the depression in iron industries to other causes than tariff agitation and tariff reduction. Indeed some of them have not hesitated to refer to the report as confirmatory of their allegation that in protective policy was to be found the ultimate cause of iron depression. We copy from the report the paragraph to which they refer in order that our readers may see how very far it is from substantiating their assertions:

Since the beginning of the present year the condition of our iron and steel industries has not improved. January and February were dull months, a specially depressing influence being the uncertainty of tariff legislation at Washington. Consumption is now, however, more active since the adjournment of Congress and the opening of spring than during the winter months, but prices are very low, competition is sharp, and the market for most products is in favor of buyers rather than sellers. Some leading influences which unfavorably affected our iron and steel industries in 1882 still remain, particularly the interruption to new railroad projects and its tendency to over production in certain leading branches, to which must now be added the late reduction of duties, which goes into effect on the first of July.

Without the tariff agitation they promoted, and the tariff production they caused, there would have been no depression in iron industries such as these writers now pretend to deplore.

A Grand Rapids druggist who nearly killed a woman by mistakenly putting poison into a prescription might have got off by paying $1,500, that sum being awarded to his victim by a jury. But he chose to appeal, and the result of the second trial was a verdict against him of $4,000. Gentlemen who were instrumental in having a tariff-for-revenue-only plank inserted in the Democratic platform of 1880 would do well to lay this Grand Rapid incident to heart. It teaches that it is well to let bad enough alone. The verdict was against them in 1880. If they appeal on the tariff issue in 1884 the verdict will be again against them and there will be more volume to it.

The mayor of Harrisburg also proclaims against firecrackers.

Capital vs. Labor.

In his Princeton Review article, David A. Well says:

The present production of pig iron in the United States is now nearly five millions of tons (4,641,000 tons in 1881), and in Great Britain (our chief competitor in supplying the commerce of the world) a little more than eight millions of tons (8,377,000 in 1881) The immediate effect of a removal of our tariff taxes on iron and steel imports would be a very heavy demand upon the iron miners and iron works of Great Britain for a large additional supply. The American market at present absorbs about 30 per cent. of the English, Belgian, and German exports of iron; and of all the iron-producing countries of Europe the net export of none, with the exception of Great Britain, is very considerable.

If this is not an excellent statement of the reasons against tariff reduction we greatly mistake, and its force is not in the least lessened by the weak attempt made by Mr. Wells to pervert it to the basis of a free trade disquisition. If the immediate effect of a removal of our tariff on iron and steel would be a heavy demand upon English iron-workers, it inevitably follows that there would be less production, less employment and less advantage to labor here. The argument that the facilities of Great Britain would not be equal to the increased demand is utterly fallacious. With limitless supplies of ore and coal, those English facilities would be quickly increased to meet any conceivable demand, and beyond question, under free trade, either our production would cease, or our wages would fall. While we take "about 40 per cent. of the English, Belgian and German exports of iron," what utter absurdity it is to say that our plant is excessive. Of all free traders Mr. Wells argues in the most vicious of vicious circles, contending that our production is excessive, and that to dispose of the excess we must produce more cheaply so as to export more, while at the same time claiming that we must decrease production, and import what we ourselves consume, so as to reduce prices to our consumers. The whole plea is English and for England. So long as England could do more business in this country the free traders would take little heed of the consequences to American prosperity or labor. Mr. Well's latest article affords to any fair mind the clearest proof that his cause is simply that of English capital against American labor.

According to the Washington Republican there is almost an epidemic of sore eyes in that city, and one medical gentleman is credited with attributing the cause to atmospheric dust. It is one of the theories of Professor Tyndall that what he terms fermentation has great influence in the production of disease. He is quoted as saying in a lecture, delivered before the Glasgow science lecture association, that the "havoc of war ten times multiplied would be be evanescent if compared with the ravages due to atmospheric dust." In this lecture he explains in various ways how the atmosphere becomes charged with the germs of disease, what they are, and how they originate and multiply. He however, does not commit himself to the statement that all epidemics originate from germs of animal life floating in the air, but he clearly demonstrates that these germs are the cause of many epidemics. He points out the effects of these germs on wounds, sores, and delicately exposed organs of the human body, and makes special reference to the means which some of the more advanced surgical authorities adopt to nullify their action. It is pleasant to add that Professor Tyndall looks forward hopefully "to the triumph of medical art over the scenes of misery produced by these now ill-understood sources of disease."

General Crook can capture a band of Indians more quickly than a Star route lawyer can make a speech.

In referring to the labor disagreements in the West the New York Herald has the impudence—no milder word will suit the case—to repeat the falsehood, "High tariff means low wages." The free traders dare not even attempt to prove this most mendacious cry. They simply keep on reiterating the falsehood, hoping that the cheating phrase will delude the unwary ready to be caught by anything that sounds well without regard to sense. In this the Anglo-American foes of honest industry are only imitating their employers in England, where the professional electioneering agent's motto is "Give us a good cry, and do what you please." But American artisans are neither ignorant nor unwary. They know that it is tariff reduction and low duties that mean low wages and that under protective tariff, before the corrupt emissaries of English trade began their most pernicious agitation, they enjoyed fair pay and prosperous homes. They realize, more especially at the present hour, that, but for the most deplorable action of Congress in lowering the iron duties without doing justice to those branches of the great iron industry that have been prostrate through the discrimination of our laws in favor of foreign goods there would have been no occasion or excuse whatever for the suspension of iron works during 1883. American workmen will spurn the lie "High tariff means low wages," and the conscienceless demagogues who proclaim it, and will rally to the call "Protective tariff, steady work and good wages. Down with free trade agitation."

It has always been a matter for astonishment that intending suicides should so frequently select a mode of death which is attended with agonizing pain, when there are so many ways of shuffling off this mortal coil which are free from that objection. Strychnine and arsenic are poisons which are very commonly used with a homicidal intent, and the effect of each of them upon the physical system are disagreeable in the extreme, Arsenic consumes the vitals as though by a corrosive acid, and strychnine produces convulsion of the most dreadful character, but suicidal women have a curious partiality for these instruments of death. Then there are the infatuated people saturate themselves with coal-oil and apply a match. Such eccentricities lend force to the theory that persons who commit suicide are always more or less insane.

The entire disappearance of an ocean steamer which left New York on March 27, and has not since been heard of, is one of the gloomy mysteries of navigation. Science and progress have made such disasters much less frequent now than formerly, but they still occur often enough to warn the world that all the achievements of the age are insufficient to guard completely against the vast and unseen forces which are met upon the ocean. Whether the Africa foundered in some terrible storm, or struck an iceberg, or was lost in some other of the many ways in which marine disasters occur, is a question on which conjecture will long be made by the friends of those who were lost on her, and which is not likely ever to be satisfactorily answered.

The great Star route trial, which for more than six months has occupied the attention of the court in Washington, is over at last and Dorsey, Brady and company have been acquitted. Such a verdict was expected, but the public still believes in the guilt of the parties. It is generally conceded that the failure of the Government to convict them is due to the form in which the indictments were made. While they were undoubtedly guilty the charge of conspiracy could not be established. All their ill-gotten gains have been spent in the effort to clear themselves.

GENERAL NOTES.

Mosquitoes have again made their appearance in London, and are credited to this country. The Yankees over there have failed to identify any of them.

Joseph Smith, of Iowa, killed 287 skunks on his farm during the month of April and then had to stop to plant his corn. The locusts and cut-worms are now eating the corn up and he thinks he made a mistake in not holding on to a good thing when he had it.

A Portland dude smirked and smiled at a pretty girl coming across the street towards him. She looked back as she entered a grocery store and he blowed a kiss at her. She went inside and bought four eggs, with which she frescoed his collar and immaculate front.

The Earl of Shaftesbury, now 83, is about to retire from business. More than a hundred hansoms and their horses are his property. These equipages are very neatly appointed, the drivers are men selected for their good conduct, and are particularly well treated.

There is a young artist in Boston who paints with his nose and bids fair to make his fortune at it. While performing on a trapeze at college he fell on his head and dislocated his neck, since which time he has been paralyzed from the neck to the heels His pictures are becoming the rage.

A San Diego lady bought a china nest egg some time ago at one of the stores, which had a wart-like prominence on one end, and the fowls now produce eggs with the same deformity. By manufacturing nest eggs of any desired shape, it appears possible to make the fowls produce a facsimile.

It is the proper thing in Germany to take the hat off when you go into any house whatsoever, and keep it off until you go out. It is really amusing to see a man wrestling with both hands full of bundles trying to get his hat on as he goes out of a store crowded with ladies. Slouch hats are not tolerated, they must be stiff.

Keely has at last discovered the secret of his motor. He says: "Molecular disintegration is the primary generator of vibratory phenomena. Propulsory forces emanating from analytical action upon compound fluid and vapor foundation evolve ethereal matter distinctive from oxydized, hydrogenated and nitrogenated components."

Mr. Briscombe has just been released from a two months' imprisonment in York Castle for his wife's supposed indebedness to an estate of which she was the administratrix. But it turns out that, instead of being indebted to the estate, Mrs. Briscombe was the estate's creditor in the sum of $290, she having made a mistake in her accounts by which it appeared that she owed it a sum of $510.

A 15-foot blacksnake was killed in the creek at Port Jarvis the other day. It had attempted to pass between two stones in the bed of the Seinglekill and became wedged. It was trying to kick loose when the water it threw up into the air made a rainbow which attracted the attention of two Port Jarvis men who were passing the spot. At first they thought it was a day-light aurora borealis.

The other night, near De Witt, Iowa, an engineer on a passenger train in approaching a cut saw that it was filled with cattle. He could not slow up in time to avert disaster, and so he pulled the throttle of the engine wide open and went through the herd like a thunderbolt, killing ten head of cattle and two horses, but without derailing his train and the passengers did not know until afterwards of their narrow escape.

There was an elephant once who knew how to play the piano, and used to travel with a circus in a foreign land. One day, when he was just going to play the March from "Faust," on a new piano, he suddenly paused and began to weep bitterly. "What is the matter with you, Caliban?" asked his keeper. The elephant pointed with his trunk to the ivory keys. The poor brute had recognized the teeth of his mother!

Poetry.

AN OLD COUNTRY CHURCH.

I stop to rest in the grass-grown yard,
To gather the autumn blooms,
And lazily dream on the velvet sward
That mantles the sunken tomb.
The raspberry briars obscure the words
Affection has carved on the stone,
With ripening blossoms and bees and birds
Forgotten they sleep alone.

And all of the men who wore this path
Or the threshold of yonder door,
To hear of a Father's love or wrath,
Are found on the earth no more;
And spiders lazily spin their threads
Secure from intruding feet,
While autumn its leaves o'er the pulpit spreads
And the list'ner's sunken seat.

I close my eyes and I seem to hear
Some sacred old hymn arise,
Or the pastor inviting, in accents clear,
To "mansions above the skies;"
Or I hear the bearers, with reverent tread,
Their charge to the chancel bear,
And the murmurous sigh for the honored dead
Floats out on the autumn air.

Then the call of the robin dispels my dreams;
So rising with bated breath,
I mark where the sun through the casement gleams
As life in the midst of death.
"He careth for sparrows;" I thank Thee, Lord,
For a temple not made with hands,
And a love that unto the least affords
A gift from Thy outstretched hands.

THE POTATO AND THE ONION.

The potato once went on a mash,
And sought an onion bed;
"That's pie for me!" observed the squash,
As all the beets turn red.
"Go way!" the onion, weeping, cried;
"Your love I cannot be;
The pumpkin be your lawful bride;
You cantelope with me!"

But onward still the tuber came,
And laid down at her feet;
"You cauliflower by any name,
And I will smell as wheat;
And I too am an early rose,
And you I've come to see;
So do not turnip your lovely nose,
But spinachat with me!"

"I do not cartot all to wed;
So go, sir, if you please!"
The modest onion meekly said,
"And lettus, pray, have peas!
Go think that you have never seen
Myself or smelled my sigh!
Too long a maiden I have been
For favors in your rye!"

"Ah, spare a cuss!" the tuber prayed;
My cherryshed bride you'll be!
You are the only weeping maid
That's currant now with me!"
And as the wily tuber spoke
He caught her by surprise,
And, giving her an artichoke,
Devoured her with his eyes!

THE LITTLE BANANA PEEL.

BY ROBERT J. BURDETTE.

Like a bar of beaten gold
I gleam in the summer's sun,
I am little, I know, but I think I can throw
A man that will weigh a ton.
Send out no challenges bold,
I blow me no vaunting horn;
But foolish is he that treadeth on me;
He'll wish he had never been born.

Like the flower of the field, vain man
Goeth forth at the break of day,
But when he shall feel my grip on his heel
Like the stubble he fadeth away;
For I lift him high up in the air,
With his heels where his head ought to be;
With a down-coming crash he maketh his mash,
And I know he's clear gone upon me.

I am scorned by the man who buys me;
I am modest and quiet and meek;
Though my talents are few, yet the work that I do
Has oft made the cellar doors creak.
I'm a blood-red republican born,
And a nihilist fearless I be;
Though the head wear a crown, I would bring its pride down,
If it sets its proud heel upon me.

Our Story Teller.

Three Minutes to Twelve.

On a cold December night some twenty years ago, when the earth was bound in a black frost, and the wind blew strong and spitefully, I was returning home from spending the evening at a friend's house, situated some three or four miles out of town. The sky was so black, the country lanes so dark, that I was truly glad when the scattered lights of an outlying suburb began to twinkle in the distance, and it was with a sigh of relief that I stopped under the first lamp I came to and looked at my watch. It was no easy task, for the lamp post had a broken pane and the strong wind blew the gas in all directions and almost extinguished it.

I read the time at last—three minutes to twelve—and, looking up from the watch face, I started to see a man standing close opposite me. I had heard nothing of his approach. We looked at each other but for a moment, yet it was sufficient time to imprint his features indelibly on my memory. A tall, shabby man, in a threadbare black frock coat and a seedy, tall hat, his face lantern jawed and sallow, his eyes sunken and lustreless, his beard long and ill trimmed. In a tone of elaborate civility he asked me the time, thanked me for my answer, giving me good night, passed into the black darkness, which seemed to engulf me like a grave.

I turned for a moment to think of his lonely walk in that grim obscurity, and resumed my homeward way, laughing at myself for the start he had given me, and reflected that the strong wind had blown away the sound of his approach. I thought of him as I sat and smoked my pipe over my fire, and felt a comfortable shudder steal upon me as I imagined him facing the bitter blast in his insufficient clothing.

In those days I was actively engaged in the timber trade and the course of my business took me a good deal about the country, and brought me largely in contact with the agents of the different noblemen and country gentleman of the district. With one of these agents, who resided near the country town of L., I had numerous transactions, and I used often to run down to L. to meet him, for the town was only fifteen miles away and was on a line of railroad. It was a dull little hole enough that only warmed up into life when the militia were out or the assizes were on.

One night I returned from L., having just made a large purchase from my friend, the agent, whose master, a sporting nobleman, was reduced to cut down the family timber. When I fell asleep that night I had a very simple but vivid dream. I thought I was standing on a lofty hill. By my side stood a veiled figure, who, with a commanding gesture, motioned me toward the town of L., which lay in the far distance. Then I awoke.

Of course I explained the thing to myself easily enough. I had been a good deal engaged in the neighborhood of the place, and had a large venture more or less remotely connected with it. Still the dream was so vivid that I could not dismiss it from my thoughts during the whole day, and when I went to bed at night I wondered if it would again visit me.

It did come again; precisely the same dream in precisely the same manner. Once more I found a convincing explanation. Doubtless I had been thinking too much about the first dream, and this had given rise to the second. But my explanation did not convince me in the least. Again I was haunted by the thing through out the day, and when I came home at night my preoccupation was so evident that it attracted the attention of my wife. She questioned me upon the cause, and only too thankful to unbosom myself of what was now almost a trouble, I told her about the dream and its repetition. She had the tact not to laugh at me, but was evidently little impressed by the narrative.

The third night it came again, if anything more vivid and startling than before. This time I was utterly unhinged, the pale face that confronted me in the looking glass was hardly recognizable for my own. I went down to breakfast, filled with a foreboding of some misfortune—bad news in my letters—I knew not what.

The maid entered with the letter bag.

"There," said my wife, passing a letter to me on which was the L. postmark, "that breaks your dream, John."

I opened it hurriedly. It was from the agent, requesting me to meet him at L. that day at one o'clock to arrange a difficulty that had arisen in the performance of his contract.

I was intensely relieved. Here was an opportunity to go to L., and perhaps the very fact of going would put me right. There were two fast trains to L. in the morning, but I decided to go by the first, regardless of the fact that I should have some hours to wait. So I found myself speeding away toward my destination.

The train was full. Pipes exhaled their fragrance, newspapers were turned and flattened, and there was that leisure kind of morning conversation that prevails among men going off by an early train to their days work. I soon discovered that I had fallen among a party of barristers, and their chief topic was a peculiarly interesting case which was to be finished that day at the L. assizes.

"He must sum up against the prisoner," said a gentleman with a flat, florid face and long sandy whiskers, who wore a light overcoat and shepherd's plaid trousers. "The defense was a complete failure, and deserved to be."

"It was certainly rather audacious," returned a clean shaven young man with a double eye-glass, who sat opposite me. "But I don't like circumstantial evidence."

Feeling glad to discover any topic that would divert my thoughts from their gloomy forebodings, I addressed myself to Heywood, the young barrister, with whom I had a slight acquaintance.

"You seem much interested in this trial that is going on," I said. "May I ask if you are engaged upon it?"

"No," he answered. "But it is a serious case. A man, a clerk dismissed from his employment, is accused of murdering the cashier of the firm. The evidence against him is entirely circumstantial; but the defence broke down at the most critical point, and the case certainly looks very black for the prisoner."

The rain was now slackening speed, and there was a general rising. I rose, too.

"Are you going to get out here?" said Mr. Heywood, opening the door as we glided into the station. "Have you come down on business?"

"Ye—s," I said, wishing to, goodness I knew what the immediate business was. "Nothing very urgent, though," I added, half to myself, as I got out.

"If you have the time to spare you had better turn in and hear the end of the trial," said Heywood. "The court will be crowded with ladies, no doubt, but I can smuggle you into a corner."

Not knowing what to do with myself for the next few hours, I accepted the offer with gratitude. I was soon seated in an obscure corner of a dingy, ill-lighted, ill-ventilated court-house, which would have been ill-smelling, too, if it had not been for the scent from the numerous ladies who were present. One of these, a buxom female obstruction, who ought to have known better, was just in front of me, and blocked my view with an enormous bonnet. I could not see the prisoner nor his counsel, or even the clock over his head, at which the people kept looking eagerly as the hour fixed for the recommencement of the trial approached.

A last there was a stir and bustle, caused by persons invisible to me, then a call for silence, and, after a few preliminaries, the summing up commenced.

I listened the more intently because I could see nothing. The clear, cold, telling sentences cut deep in my consciousness. How distinct and convincing it all was! How all those minute facts, the mute testimony of footmarks and the like, arranged and distributed by that powerful intellect, grouped themselves into the damning proof of guilt!

I cared nothing for the prisoner had no personal interest in the trial, but my mind was wonderfully fascinated by the tale of horror. At length the weighty tones ceased, and a murmur of relief and expectation passed round the assembly. At this moment the woman with the high bonnet shifted her seat, and I obtained a full view of the prisoner. I started involuntarily. Where had I seen that face before?

The jury returned after a short absence; the verdict was guilty, accompanied with a recommendation to mercy. Again the judge's solemn tones sounded through the court; again they ceased.

There was a dead silence. I sprang to my feet as if impelled to do so by some unseen power and looked steadily at the prisoner. His face was averted from me for the moment, but the looks of the people showed me that he was about to speak. Slowly he turned round, and in a voice whose deep, earnest tones could be heard all over the assembly, he said:

"There lives but one man who can prove me innocent—and there he stands."

With white face and outstretched hands he pointed—at me. I gazed at him with a sudden flash of recognition. It was the man I had seen under the lamp, and by a strange coincidence, at this moment the court clock struck twelve.

The plea that had been got up by the defense was an alibi. But there was a space of two hours that could not be accounted for, and the theory of the prosecution was that the crime had been committed during that time. My evidence supplied the missing link, for the place in which I had seen the man was so far distant from the scene of the murder that it was impossible for him to have been anywhere near at the time of its occurrence.

And the dream? Only a coincidence, you may say perhaps, or a fit of indigestion, or my timber contract. Nevertheless, as I have told it to you, so it happened. Explain it away who can.

Look Out For Sunstroke.

The treatment in the cases of sunstroke, while being simple, requires considerable care. First the physician has to reduce the temperature of the body. This is done by wrapping the patients in blankets soaked in cold water, or by simply administering a spray bath of cold water and by placing icebags around his head. Too sudden a change of temperature must be avoided. The shock of placing the patient in an ice-cold bath would be fatal. It is also necessary that he should be kept perfectly quiet. These suggestions about the treatment of a patient may be found valuable where a doctor can not be reached, and should be carried out without hesitation. In case of failure of the heart's action stimulants must be given. If the patient is delirious he may be kept quiet by small doses of bromide. Purgatives may also be given.

Prevention, however, is better than cure, and the following hints as to what should be done to avoid being overcome by the heat will be found valuable: Sunstrokes are sometimes unavoidable, but sometimes they are caused by carelessness or heedlessness. If a person has to go out in the hot sun much it is a good plan always to carry a cabbage leaf sewed in his hat. The moisture will keep the head cool. A free perspiration, if kept up, will also prevent a person from being overcome by the heat. Many persons, while in a perspiration, will frequently sit in a draught, and when they again go out in the hot sun and get heated they are affected by the heat. The blood may also become overheated from over doses of alcohol, and a sunstroke will result more quickly under such conditions. An ordinary person may consume three or four ounces of alcohol a day with impunity, but the blood will become poisoned if more than that quantity is taken. Whisky contains 50 per cent. of alcohol and beer only about 20 per cent. A person that is sunstruck is generally sick from three days to a week, but suffers from its effects during the entire summer and frequently the next year. The man who gets the most rest at night, the one that breathes the purest air while sleeping, lives by day on the most nutritious food, worries not at all and keeps his mind on an even keel—this man can best endure the miseries and risks of the "heated term." The importance of sufficient sleep is much overlooked, especially by those whose business requires them to rise at an early hour. It is while sleeping that the body recuperates and mends itself, and a half mended body that was at work the night before, playing billiards and drinking lager till 1 a. m. is in a poor condition to work the next day with the mercury at 90.

Once in a great while, say twice a century, a plumber gets hard up for cash. So he goes to a gasman for relief.

How a Tornado Looked.

Kansas Despatch to New York Times.

Before the visitation of the tornado here the air was heavy and the fitful wind carried sheets of rain hither and thither without apparent direction. In another hour the skies had grown darker and across their sullen surface torn scraps of clouds in fantastic shapes scudded with a velocity that told of the presence of vast air currents somewhere in middle space. These were followed by dark sheets as of smoke that rolled up from the horizon, broke and lost themselves. The air suddenly grew cold. It is impossible to describe the weird and unnatural chill, save that it was icy and lasted for some moments. Just then a gigantic cone shaped cloud, the point toward the earth, appeared in the Northwest. Those who noted the time saw that it was exactly 4:30. The cloud rushed into view so quickly that it was impossible to tell whether it was born of a conflict of the elements before the eye or came from some point beyond. Moving with inconceivable rapidity, and bounding like a ball, sometimes hundreds of feet above the earth and sometimes trailing upon it, the monster passed over Wyandotte, and paused at the bar opposite the mouth of the Kaw, where it sucked up tons of sand, completely changing its color from dark blue to a deep dun, then it zizzagged upward, bounded into mid-air and disappeared.

Scarcely had it made its spectral exit when another cloud, almost identical in size and shape, appeared at about the point where the first was seen. The cloud can be likened to nothing so much as a partially collapsed balloon with the neck enormously elongated and twisting about. The color was reddish yellow, distinctly relieving it against the darker background. This extraordinary apparition of the skies moved directly toward the city, not very fast apparently, but springing up and down in an uncanny dance. As it came nearer, one could see that every time it touched the ground it swept it clean, carrying up the debris and dropping it as it passed. A few moments after its appearance it struck West Kansas City, barely touching, however, and its damages confined principally to the unroofing of houses, demolishing the upper portion of the Stock Exchange, and killing one man. It leaped into the air, striking the bluff near Eighteen Street, and passing on East and slightly North for near two miles. In the greater part of this distance the storm funnel touched the ground, and a wilderness of ruin marks its track.

The passage of the tornado was so sudden that people did not have time to be frightened till it was over but the scene of terror that followed in its wake was something that words cannot describe. It cut a clean track through the city three miles in extent and from one hundred to three hundred yards wide. Heavy houses were demolished, small frame houses were scattered to the winds, and trees were twisted from the earth as if they were weeds. The number of houses entirely demolished is fifty, and the number more or less damaged will amount to about 200. The loss is about $200,000. Three persons were killed outright, and many others very badly injured.

Singular Names.

The intense devotion of the Puritans to the Scriptures, particularly to the Old Testament Scriptures, prompted them to adopt the old Scripture names, and the Bible was ransacked for names as odd and uncommon as possible, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Strange combinations of names were made and, in order that the unlucky youth might be as well loaded as possible, several were bestowed. One unfortunate of the time of Cromwell was afflicted with the name Nebuchadnezzer Belshazar Hezekiah Ebenezer Grump, while another went through life bearing the burden of Senaccharib Jeremiah Sarum. Finally the climax was reached by giving children a whole text of Scripture for a name. Praise God Barebones, of the Rump Parliament, was said to have groaned under the affliction of "Praise-God for-if it-had not-been-through-His-mercy-Christ-Jesus-you-would-have-been-damned Barebones, one of the Barebones' fellow sufferers was, "For now-we-see-through-a-glass-darkly-but-then-face-to-face Higgers." This extravagance in naming was its own cure for after the restoration many of the Puritans found themselves so much the object of popular ridicule on account of their lengthy and absurd names, that they voluntarily changed them for other and less cumbersome handles.

Blooming for the Czar.

From the Nashville American.

While the electric current was flashing the news of the Czar's coronation from within the walls of Moscow over the snow-covered plains of Russia to St. Petersburg, and thence via Germany and France, under the broad Atlantic to New York, across many States to the city of Nashville, a night-blooming cereus in the hothouse of Mrs. Ewing, No. 32 Vauxhall street, this city, commenced suddenly to bloom, and lo! as its outer leaves unfolded, in its centre was disclosed a perfect crown.

The coincidence does not stop here. It was ascertained from the fortunate owner of this plant that it had grown from a cutting or slip cut many years ago by the Rev. P. S. Fall, formerly of this city, but now of Lexington, Ky., in the gardens of the Czar of St. Petersburg. Sunday, when the beautiful white flower unfolded itself, and that, too, in the broad daylight, those who saw it were astonished beyond description. Upon looking closer a crown was seen in the centre of the flower. It was a mystery to all until yesterday morning, when the two-column-and-a-half description in the American of the crowing of the Czar was hailed as a startling and pleasing coincidence, if not a proof of the truth that a subtle power or influence permeates the whole of nature.

Girofle Mahaffy's Love.

From the Chicago Tribune.

"Pass the butter."

Out beneath the star-gemmed sky, and under the sturdy old oaks that had bid defiance to the storms of centuries, Girofle Mahaffy and George W. Simpson were sitting that beautiful June night. Up from the westward came the sound of the sea as its silvered foam plashed in rhythmic cadence on the white sands of the beach, and through the masses of foliage that encircled Brierton Villa could be seen, ever and anon, especially anon, the fitful flicker of the ice cream lairs that flecked the horizon in every direction. It was a night for a poet's pen, a painter's brush, or a large schooner of weiss beer. And so they stand there, the moments passing by unheeded, the girl nestling in his arms secure in the deep trustfulness of an overpowering passion, while the man, smoothing her fair forehead gently, bends over now and then to kiss the rosy lips that are upturned to his, and then wonders in a dreamy, idyllic, North-Side fashion who the last man that held a similar situation on Girofle's staff might have been. Suddenly the girl breaks the silence—she had broken the man on the last matinee day. "And you must really go," she says; "really and truly?"

"Yes," he answers, "when duty calls we must obey, and I have seldom known duty to call on the poorest hand."

"But I cannot let you go," she says passionately. "It is cruel to test my love so sorely"—and breaking down in a storm of sobs she clings to him more closely than ever. And then, just as he fears for her reason, so terrible does the blow seem, the sobs that are making the lithe form quiver with anguish cease and Girofle looks up to him with a happy smile upon her face. "I will be brave," she says, "but you must make me one promise, a holy, sacred promise that even death itself may not absolve you from."

"I will do it gladly my precious one," he murmurs. "What is this promise?"

"You must promise," she says, "to lend me your razor."

"Why, of course I will, sweetheart," he replies gayly. "I promise you that cheerfully. But why do you make such a strange request?"

"Because," she says, in those low, mellow tones that would lure a man through inferno or to Harvard Junction, "I have a large, throbbing bunion."

Starting a Young Man.

It is related of a wealthy Philadelphian, who has been dead these many years, that a young man came to him once and ask for help to start in business.

"Do you drink?" inquired the millionaire.

"Occasionally."

"Stop it! Stop it for a year and then come and see me."

The young man broke off the habit at once, and at the end of a year again presented himself.

"Do you smoke?" asked the great man.

"Yes, now and then."

"Stop it! Stop it for a year and then come and see me."

The young man went away and cut loose from the habit, and after worrying through another twelve months once more faced the philanthropist.

"Do you chew!"

"Yes."

"Stop it! Stop it for a year and then come and see me."

But the young man never called again. When some one asked why he didn't make one more effort he replied:

"Didn't I know what he was driving at? He'd have told me that as I had stopped chewing, drinking and smoking I must have saved enough to start myself."—Wall Street News.

The Czar.

The Emperor who has just been crowned at Moscow is six feet high and is deep chested and broad shouldered. His light gray eyes resemble those of his mother's relations at Hesse Darmstadt more than his father, the late Emperor's, who had dark blue eyes (such as the French call blue black), which are to be seen in the pictures of Alexander I., Paul, and Peter the Great. In figure and style he is also like his uncle, the late Grand Duke of Hesse Darmstadt. The shape of his head, which is above the average size, like most of his family, is rather peculiar. His forehead is high. A small mouth, with extremely good teeth, which he only shows when he laughs, is his best feature. His hair is auburn and his complexion very fair. In St. Petersburg he is always attired in uniform, but when on a holiday he wears the black and white shepherd's plaid, such a favorite with English noblemen, a black tie, white hat, but no gloves (though he carries them), ring, or watch. That he has been no carpet soldier is evident from the marks of frost bites on the third and fourth fingers of his left hand, and a scar on his temple, where a Turkish bullet grazed his head.

A Munificent Gift.

Joseph E. Temple, of Philadelphia, who is well known because of his munificent gift of $50,000 to the Academy of Fine Arts of that city, has, within the past few days, made a tender to the directors of the Zoological society of a present of $50,000 under certain conditions. The benefactor proposes to give the garden association this large amount in securities which bear an interest of at least 5 per cent. per annum. In addition to this he proposes to subscribe immediately to $10,000 worth of the loan of the organization. The consideration which Mr. Temple asks for his gifts is that the garden and all its attaactions shall be thrown open to the public two days in each week. The offer was referred to a committee of the directors, who are to consult counsel, because it is feared that some legal complications might arise were the present to be accepted at once. If the decision is to the effect that Mr. Temple's gift will not interfere with any existing rights then it will be accepted. The experiment of a free day at the Academy of Fine Arts, brought about by Mr. Temple's bounty, proved a great success. Sunday was chosen, and the receipts of the Academy for visitors have increased since this plan has been adopted. Some time ago Mr. Temple presented to the vestry of the P. E. church of the Holy Trinity, at Nineteenth and Walnut streets, Philadelphia, $10,000 for a chime of bells. These are being cast in Belgium. The chime will comprise twenty-five bells of various sizes, and it will surpass anything of the kind in the country. The same gentleman subscribed $25,000 for a statue of General Reynolds, to be placed in Fairmount Park.

English Journalism.

Justin McCarthy says that the future of journalism in England is a greater degree of Americanization—that after a while they will even get to interviewing people, writes a London correspondent of the Chicago News. Now, just think of it, and then let loose a half-dozen Chicago journalists in this big village. Why, they would go through the town like a pack of eagles in an Irish hamlet, and they would be about as popular, too. The English newspaper man insists on having faithful reports of uninteresting speeches and debates, but he cannot abide to have anything that everybody else has not got, and he wouldn't go out of his rut for anything. Unlike his American brother, he has politics of so earnest a sort that he won't report an opposition meeting, and he simply despises the journalist on the other party paper. The reporter calls himself "we," despises personal journalism, looks forward to a sub-editorship, at £5 a week, and counts his salary at so much a year. Lately he is getting to be a much better sort of man, and he is improving in his style of work, but he is as much of a machine, an unwieldy dependent upon some outside source for mental steam, and as helpless without it, as the printing press that ought to choke over his work sometimes.

The Railronders' Mutual Benefits.

The second annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Mutual Benefit association, composed of trainmen, says the Altoona Tribune, was held on the 12th at the Railroad Employes' library, Pittsburgh. Delegates were present from nineteen divisions of the road. Jacob Weidman, of Pittsburgh, was president. The reports of officials which were submitted gave the following information concerning the workings of the organization: During the past year $1,674 have been paid on claims, $430 have been paid to sick benefits, each patient receiving $5 per week. At present there are 362 members, the maximum paid to any member is $1,500. The organization is two years old, and during that time has paid out $2,845. Last year there were three deaths and one permanently disabled. This year there have been four deaths and one disabled. Each member is assessed $1.25 per month, and only those in the employ of the road are eligible to the order. The last year there has been $916.75 paid to disabled employes. On July 1, 1882, there was $422 in the treasury. This year there is $1,241.25, showing an increase of $824.50.

—It is a penal offense in this State to ride on either passenger or freight cars without paying the fare. The Act of Assembly making it so provides that every person so offending shall pay a fine of not less than five dollars, nor more than fifteen dollars, which shall be paid to the treasurer of the school district in which said offense shall have been committed; and such person so convicted shall be committed to the county jail for a period not exceeding ten days. This law is not generally known, and young men and boys in the habit of "jumping a freight," may find themselves in jail before they are aware of it. The law is plain.—Clearfield Republican.

Fashion Notes.

The favorite riding habit in Central Park this season is gray.

A very close capote called the nurse's cap is one of the popular Paris bonnets.

Gigot sleeves and bustles are in vogue in Paris, but are not as yet popular in America.

Skeleton bonnets showing all or nearly all the coiffeure, are novelties, but not much worn.

Langtry turbans are much worn in the street, at matinees, and even in the evening at theatres.

The Chinese capote is the latest fancy in bonnets. It has a conical cap crown and cutaway brim, pointed and close at the top.

Waistcoats are again in favor; they are made just like a man's and ever them is worn a little cutaway jacket with loose front.

London girls of the highest social position are making it fashionable to take lessons in dressmaking. This is a move in the right direction.

Black relieved with the merest daub or touch of white in the way of lace or flowers remains the favorite costume of high ceremony with New York women.

When artistic dressmaking becomes a fashionable occupation and accomplishment there will be less "fuss" about dresses that have been spoiled and not sent home in time or at the time promised.

A very picturesque and becoming hat, called the invalid's capote, has a very large visor lined with rich black velvet, and is trimmed with a turf of black feathers and black velvet ribbon strings.

A Blessing.

The pain in all his joints became intense; fever, with its deteriorating effects, was now added, and he became rapidly reduced to the semblance of a skeleton, and his sufferings were of such indescribable character that those who most loved him sometimes thought it would be better if he were called away. At this time, physicians, well-known in this city (Pittsburgh), informed his parents that he was in imminent danger of total Paralysis, and directly afterward they announced to his sorrowful mother that they could give no hopes of his recovery. At this juncture the use of Peruna was commenced, and in six weeks Mr. William Curtis was well and at work. Read page 23 of Dr. Hartman's "Ills of Life;" get it from your druggist.

Dukes' Funeral.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 16.—The streets of this place are terribly crowded with people inquiring about the funeral of Nicholas Lyman Dukes, which took place this morning from the residence of Asbury Struble, in German township, about eleven miles southwest of this place. The time for assembling at the house was 11 o'clock and at about 11:30 the services began. People were there as early as 9 o'clock and they continued to gather in the yard and outside along the road until a little after 12 o'clock, when the procession started for the Church Hill cemetery, which is just two miles from the house, situate on the edge of a beautiful grove. Rev. A. S. Millholland and M.C. Bailey officiated at the funeral. The first is the pastor of the Presbyterian church at this place and the other preaches alternately at Fairchance and McClellandtown Presbyterian churches. Both are able and judicious men. The services were opened by Mr. Millholland, who announced the hymn, "Jesus, lover of my soul," and then read it through in a very impressive manner. No selected choir led, but nearly all joined in singing, which brought many to tears. This was the only hymn that was sung. Rev. Bailey then read the Fifty-first Psalm, "Free me." "Free me, O Lord, from blood guiltiness"—the prayer uttered by David after the killing of Uriah, whom he had sent to the front of the battle.

The procession moved to the cemetery. Rev. J. P. Sangston, of McClellandtown; Henry Clay Rush and ex-Sheriff Isaac Messmore, of this place; Jesse J. Hoover, Joseph J. Galley, and W. M. Lardin, farmers, of German township, acted as pallbearers. The funeral cortege contained 109 buggies and carriages and 38 persons on horseback.

High License in Illinois.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., June 15.—The Harper High License bill passed the Senate this afternoon, 30 to 20. The Governor signed the bill soon afterward.

Slaughter of the Innocents.

LONDON, June 16.—A terribly calamity, involving the death of 178 children, occurred in the town of Sunderland, in the county of Durham, this evening. From the details thus far received it appears that an entertainment had been given in Victoria hall by a conjuror, which was attended almost altogether by children, several thousand being in attendance. The accident, which was so direful in its effects, occurred at the close of the performance. The body of the hall had been entirely cleared of its occupants, when some twelve hundred of the little ones came rushing down stairs from the gallery. At the top of the first flight of stairs there was a door which opened only twenty inches, and thus but one child was permitted to pass through at a time. At this point while the mass of children were pushing forward, some of them fell and were unable to rise, owing to the others crowding on. The result was that a great number were pushed down, trampled on and suffocated. The scene was terrible, and no effort could stop the mad rush of the affrighted children. They came on pell mell, though strangely without much shouting, and soon 178 of them were knocked down and suffocated to death by others trampling upon them. The greater number of the bodies, which were badly mangled from the trampling, lay seven or eight deep. Many of the victims, and others who were not killed, had their clothing torn from their bodies, and this, together with the bleeding bodies of the unfortunates, shows the terrible nature of the struggle. The ages of the 178 children known to to have been killed ranged from 4 to 14 years. The excitement in the town when the news of the disaster spread was terrific. Great crowds of people rushed to the scene until at least twenty thousand persons surrounded the hall. The feeling was so intense that the authorities ordered out the Sixty-eighth infantry to preserve order. The work of getting out the bodies of the victims was begun immediately. They were laid out in the hall and the parents of those killed were admitted for the purpose of identifying the bodies of their children. Most heartrending scenes transpired while the work of identification was in progress. The mothers of the dead children constantly uttered piercing shrieks and many of them fainted on discovering the bodies of their little ones.

A Farce Ended.

WASHINGTON, June 14.—"You can ask the jury whether they have any communication to make to the court," said Judge Wylie to the crier, when criminal court, hearing the star route case, reassembled this morning.

Crier Donaldson soon returned with the message that the jury desired to communicate with the court.

They filed into the court-room apparently none the worse for their long confinement. When they were seated, Judge Wylie said: Gentlemen of the jury, the court has sent for the purpose of inquiring whether you have any communication to make.

The foreman, in reply, stated the jury had agreed upon a verdict, and a painful silence fell upon the court room, only to be broken by wild shouts of applause. When, in a clear tone of voice, the foreman stated the verdict was not guilty, immediately the decorum of the court of justice was forgotten, and cheers resounded from all quarters of the crowded room. Mrs. S. W. Dorsey sprang to her feet and clapped her hands, while the tears streamed down her cheeks, and there were many ladies in court who were silently weeping. Mr. Davidge quietly asked to have the verdict recorded, which was done. While the deputy marshals were vainly endeavoring to quell the tumult, S. W. Dorsey and Brady were the recipients of many warm congratulations, and as they left the court room they were greeted with renewed cheers by the crowd in front of City Hall.

The foreman stated to a representative of the associated press that five ballots were taken by the jury. The first ballot was upon the question of the existence of a conspiracy, and the ballot resulted in a vote of three for and nine against conspiracy. On the second ballot the nine was increased to ten, although the vote was then upon the innocence or guilt of the defendants. This vote remained unchanged until about 8 o'clock this morning, when the acquital was agreed upon.

Young Nutt in Jail.

UNIONTOWN, June 15.—A correspondent says: "Young Nutt was visited in jail to day by his mother, and by Messrs. Boyd and Breckenridge. The latter and Mrs. Nutt drove to the jail about the same time as yesterday. Jim, as he is familiarly known to the Uniontown people, takes his imprisonment easy, and says nothing about the tragedy to any person excepting counsel, or those of his own family. Mr. Playford is preparing a petition, which will probably be presented in court to morrow, for the release of Mr. Nutt. There is considerable speculation as to what the court will do in the premises. The best legal talent is at sea concerning the matter. A disinterested lawyer makes the sage suggestion that young Nutt be tried at the earliest day possible. Said he: "The foul death of his father, the social ruin of Miss Nutt and the perverted justice which set Dukes at liberty, are still working on the minds of the masses and must extenuate young Nutt's crime in the face of the dry logic of legal hirelings who will attempt to prove all the elements of murder in the first degree. My opinion of the case is that the jury will disagree, no matter how often the issue is joined between the commonwealth and defendant, and in this way Nutt will secure his release."

The Dukes jurors have been conspicuous by their absence from town since the tragedy occurred. It is safe to predict that none of them will act as pall-bearers at the funeral to-morrow morning.

A Clegyman who Kills.

MANSFIELD, La., June 17.—J. Lane Borden, president of the Mansfield female college was killed by the Rev. Benjamin Jenkins, Jr., this morning. Borden ruined a young lady friend of Jenkins. The difficulty occurred before B. T. Jenkins. store Jenkins used a revolver and fired five or six shots. One shot took effect in Borden's leg, one struck him in the heart, shattering his watch into fragments, and one struck him in the forehead just between the eyes. He lived about two hours, but never spoke after the shooting. The greatest excitement prevails, but Jenkins has the sympathy of the entire community. He and his brother C. E. Jenkins, who was present, surrendered to the sheriff. A preliminary examination will probably be held to-morrow. Jenkins is a young man about 25 years of age and was ordained as a minister at the last session of the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church south. He is a son of Hon. Benjamin T. Jenkins, of this place, and has been preaching at Roeblin Station, on the New Orleans Pacific railroad. T. T. Jenkins, Sr., is one of the trustees of the college. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict that the deceased came to his death by a pistol shot fired by Benjamin T. Jenkins, Jr., and exonerating C. E. Jenkins.

Pennsylvania and Lehigh.

PHILADELPHIA, June 15.—For some time past the rumor has been current in railroad stock circles that the Pennsylvania railroad company intended making another important move in the development of its system by leasing the lines of the Lehigh Valley railroad company. Dealings in the stock were accompanied by the wildest excitement, and the number of shares bought and sold aggregated 5,000. Towards 4 o'clock the general denial got pretty thoroughly circulated and than the brokers began to entertain doubts on the subject and the demand for the stock appeared to die out. Lehigh Valley is firmly held by investors, and the slightest demand for it is apt to run up the price. Vice President Hartshorne, of the Lehigh Valley railroad company, when interviewed this afternoon, said that he had no knowledge whatever of the rumored lease of his road by the Pennsylvania. At the Pennsylvania railroad office the story was also denied, President Roberts stating that the first intimation he had on the subject was that he had read in the newspapers. Notwithstanding these denials there are many who still believe that there is something in the story.

Two Ministers Commit Suicide.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 14.—Rev. E. W. Chase committed suicide yesterday by hanging at Richfield, near Minneapolis. He came to St. Paul sixteen years ago. He was then secretary of the Young Men's Christian association, was afterward president of the societies for the relief of the poor and prevention of cruelty to animals. Insanity was the cause of his self-destruction.

COLUMBUS, O., June 14.—Jacob Romick, of Hilliard, near Columbus, was found dead by hanging, in his room last night. He was a regular minister of the Methodist Episcopal church, and his act is a great shock to the community. He leaves a wife and six children. Insanity was the cause.

Archbishops to Meet.

PEORIA, Ill., June 15.—In an interview with Bishop Spaulding this morning he corroborated the statement that the archbishops of the United States have been commanded to assemble at Rome next October to arrange a programme for the plenary council to be held in America. The business of the council will only pertain to ecclesiastical affairs of this country, not involving Irish affairs. It is three months since Bishop Spaulding left Rome, and the above were the pontifical intentions at the time of his departure. The plans for the establishment of a Catholic university in this country are immature.

The Failures of the Week.

NEW YORK, June 15.—The Bradstreet reports 165 failures in the United States during the past week, 17 more than the preceding week, 61 more than the corresponding week last year and 105 more than the same week of 1881. Compared with the preceding week the middle states had 39, an increase of 2; New England 31, an increase of 3 southern states and territories 21, an increase of 5; western states and territories 21, an increase of 5; western states 46, an increase of 6, and Canada and the provinces 23, an increase of 9.

Burdette Talks to the Chester Cadets.

CHESTER, June 13.—The annual address before the cadets of the Pennsylvania Military Academy was delivered this evening by Mr. Robert J. Burdette before a large audience. The commencement literary exercises will take place to morrow.

Laid to Rest.

On Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock people wended their way to the Episcopal church to mingle their sympathy with those who, with solemn religious services, were mourning the death of the late Mrs. Jane W. Hale. The casket was borne up the centre aisle of the church by six pall-bearers, and the service for the Burial of the Dead was said with solemn earnestness. The choir was composed of Evan Blanchard, Esq., Dr. George Harris, W. W. Montgomery and Miss Constance Richard; Miss Mary Bradley, organist.

Then the solemn procession wended its way to Union Cemetery, where dust was committed to dust. Sorrowing friends stood by while the casket was being lowered into the earth, bitter tears were shed, hearts with anguish were well nigh breaking, for one who was dearer to them than life had passed away from earth. Perhaps it was the sharpest sorrow ever experienced, for earth has no more bitter agony than the severing of life-long ties of love. But there is a Physician who can cure these heart wounds. Gilead has a balm which can heal these breaking hearts. There is a land where there'll be no parting from which the blessed will go no more out forever.

—The Evangelical congregation who worship in the church at Valentines Ironworks will provide a strawberry and ice cream festival on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week in one of the store rooms on Allegheny street just vacated by Valentines Store Company, Limited. To make things more interesting and to raise a larger sum of money, they have secured a valuable silver-headed cane which they will give to one of two gentlemen receiving the largest number of votes. The gentlemen selected are Messrs. Amos Mullen and L. L. Brown. We are not prepared to state how much it will cost he friends of these gentlemen to vote for them, but are inclined to agree in opinion that they constitute about as lively a "team" as could be chosen, and we'll bet on the one who —gets the most votes.

—A town to be called "Peale," after ex-Senator Peale of Lock Haven, has been laid out by the Clearfield bituminous coal company, on the Moshannon, midway between Kylertown and the iron bridge on the new road leading to Snow Shoe. The plot has been laid out with public squares and parks, lots for churches, school houses and hotels. Water works are being erected. The town is in the shape of a semi-circle and located on the opposite side of the creek from the railroad, which runs along the mountain side, 250 feet above the place. A road leading to the town is to be constructed. Peale will be the centre of the company's mining operations for many years, and in five years it will have a population of 3,000 people.

A Minister's Escape.

On Sunday, June 10, says the Conference News, Rev. William Noble, of Snow Shoe, this county, hitched up his horse in haste to go to his afternoon appointment. He jumped into the buggy and was off, but only had one line fastened to the bridle. When he pulled, of course, it drew the horse around short and threw Mr. Noble out of the buggy on his back between the front and hind wheel, and his feet were fast in the buggy. For a wonder, the horse stood still until the parson got loose, and then he tried it over, but he first fastened the other line. We are glad our friend escaped injury. As bad as Methodist preachers need money, two hundred and seventy five dollars would not buy "Pet."

—Harry Teats & Co., as first-class grocers, have few equals and no superiors.

—Gregg Post G. A. R., held an open meeting after the conclusion of the regular meeting Saturday evening.

—"Dickens' Dutchman" (Charley Langheimer,) has been liberated from the penitentiary once again and is now in New York.

—Oscar Duck, son of James Duck of Brush Valley, had the thumb of his right hand sawed off by a circular saw on Monday, June 11.

—Altoona is not sure of that hospital appropriation yet, and will send citizens to Harrisburg to urge the Governor to sign the bill.

—The annual ice cream and strawberry festival given on Friday and Saturday evenings under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. did not score a brilliant success.

—The welcome and familiar figure of Manager Tiffin was observed on the streets last week. The destroyed portions of the planing mill dam will be repaired immediately.

—The State College is now connected with the telephone-speaking world and finds the new order of things very convenient and satisfactory. The messages to and from that institution are quite numerous.

—A meeting of the Bellefonte Electric Light Company was held Friday evening and the following gentlemen elected a Board of Directors: C. T. Alexander, L. T. Munson, L. L. Brown, H. K. Hicks and Jonathan Harper.

—Ed Forster had a surprise party all to himself on Saturday. He reached into a barrel for a kitten that was supposed to be there, and a big, grey rat ran up his shirt sleeves and down his back. The next time he will make a closer inspection before grabbing.

—The Bellefonte Car Works are not yet disposed of, the attempted exchange for Wisconsin timber lands not having been consummated. No new scheme is in progress, but after the repairs to the water power are completed new negotiations will be commenced.

—There's a grocery store which we should praise and speak well of it all our days. Its location is in the Bush House Row; and for merit it "takes the cake," you know. As an establishment it is very fine and worth more than a vast gold mine. They call the place Sechler's store; only that and nothing more.

—On Sunday afternoon a meeting was held in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association of this place which was conducted by the General Secretary J. W. Miller and was intended as a farewell demonstration to that gentleman. The attendance was larger than usual and exercises proved to be quite effective. Mr. Miller will depart on Saturday next.

—Swimming is said to be in all respects one of the most beneficial exercises that can be engaged in during the hot season. Aside from the benefit it affords, knowledge of the art of swimming may be invaluable some time and should be more generally cultivated. Bellefonte affords very limited opportunity, however, to practice the sport,and if there are not many expert swimmers in this vicinity the reason is evident.

—We have just received word of the death at Grand Rapids, Mich., of Dr.Campbell,a gentleman well known in this county. The sad event occurred on the 16th of June. The body of the deceased was taken to Altoona, Pa., where it arrived on Tuesday morning, the deceased havin numerous relatives in that city. Mrs. James McClain, of this place, is a relative. The interment will occur in Altoona.

—Washington Rees received word last week that things were in a state of confusion at his home in this place, and that he had better come home immediately. He came, and inquired into the matter, and when informed what the rumpus was, his eyes bulged out like a couple of door knobs. The cause of all this excitement was the arrival of a twelve pound baby on Thursday night. It's a boy, and Wash. will put him in training immediately to play first base with the champion league nine next summer.

—The legal offices occupied by A. O. Furst, Esq., on East High street, are being superbly adorned with paper of the handsomest pattern we have ever seen. It is of the popular old-gold style and is set off at the top with a wide and very beautiful border of a delicate pattern which corresponds perfectly with the paper. The ceilings are ornamented in the modern style of the decorator's art and the two apartments present an appearance which for elegance combined with true taste and comfort cannot be excelled.

A Railroad Through Philipsburg.

Soon, says the Philipsburg Journal, the engineers will be in the field to make the preliminary survey to run a direct line through our city—perhaps to make our city the terminus of the road for a few years. Aside from the general advantages which must accrue to a town from any road, there are particular advantages to be gained by the advent of this road. Should it continue its course westward it will give us two outlets for our coal, namely, east and west. Then the competition between the two great lines of railway, which much necessarily reduce the freight tariff, is an object to be greatly desired by our coal operators and business men. At present we are in the hands of of a single road and completely at its mercy. Whether that road has ever abused its power or not, cuts no figure in the present inquiry. Such an abuse is certainly one of the possibilities. Great credit is due to our citizens who have worked so arduously to get the road through our city, and are not composed of the class who need life and energy smuggled into them, but have demonstrated what they can do.

—Mrs. J. G. Love's concerts on Thursday and Friday evenings of this week will be given for objects the merit of which should elicit the support and patronage of every generous person in Bellefonte. We are informed that on Thursday night the proceeds will be given to the M. E. church and on Friday night they will be given to the Young Men's Christian Association. We feel that it is proper that we should state the generous objects to which Mrs. Love and her class are devoting their splendid musical talents. But the rare merit of the entertainment should of itself be sufficient inducement to secure crowded houses, and we have that perfect faith in a Bellefonte public to believe that such will be the case. It may be appropriate to state that one of the most cultured musicians in Bellefonte, who is always frank enough to express his real convictions, listened to a rehearsal a few evenings since and pronounced the music equal to the best he ever heard in Bellefonte. Praise from such a source is golden.

A Superabundance of Electricity.

On Saturday evening this place was visited by a severe storm in which lightning was the most destructive element. The thunder roared with ever-increasing volume of sound and the lightning illuminated every object with a lurid glare. Near the residence of Mr. J. V. Thomas one of the tall telegraph poles was struck and rendered useless. The electricity flashed over the wires into the office of the Western Union Telegraph Company in this place and played havoc with the delicate apparatus over which Manager Speer receives his messages, cutting off connection in some directions.

A tenant house at Centre Furnace owned by Mr. Moses Thomson, was struck by lightning, but we believe it was not much damaged.

The telephone wires at State College were useless on Monday owing to the severity of Saturday's storm.

—The choicest and most seasonable groceries always for sale by Harry Teats & Co.

—It is encouraging to read that the potato bug has found an enemy which will drive him to other grounds or kill him on sight. An exchange says that the army with vermillion colors is being driven toward the northeast before the advance guard of tiger beetles, a band of lively warriors resembling the old-fashioned pumpkin bug. The beetle is spotted like a tiger, and is as voracious, according to its capacity, as a tiger. But it does not destroy vegetation. Its prey is bug and all insect life. It goes around lively and darts at a potato bug or any other luckless creature of the kind, and in less time than it takes to write this line the beetle is engaged in its feast, and the days of the victim are ended.

—The rooms in which Gregg Post, G. A. R., of this place, hold their regular meetings have recently been much improved with handsome paper of very neat pattern. A ventilator has also been placed in the ceiling of the audience room. It is the intention to procure about 30 corps badges to be suspended on the walls in appropriate places, each corps represented in the Post to be marked by its separate badge.

—That veteran grocer, H. Sechler is carrying on the business more extensively than ever before.

—On each side of the large grocery store are abundant supplies of all kinds of groceries. In the adjoining room is one of the neatest, most elegant meat markets in this section. Of couse, we refer to the mammoth establishment of Sechler & Co., in the Bush House block. Call at that store and be convinced that all we say of it is true.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

"The Pet Stock, Pigeon and Poultry Bulletin" for June is at hand. The name of this magazine is altogether too long for a pet name, but if it suits the manager we can stand it. This magazine was established in 1869, therefore is now running its fourteenth volume. The present number is as full of interest as its predecessors. It is ornamented with many fine cuts printed on a good quality of paper and in clear type. To those interested in pet stock or poultry, this magazine is full of interest. We recommend it to our friends in Centre county who are interested in poultry. Try it; you will like it. Terms, $1.25 per year. Address, Chas. H. Harker, 62 Courtland street, New York.

The Peacemaker for June has as a frontispiece a beautiful cut of John Bright, the great English statesman. The book is neatly printed on beautiful white paper. The present number is the twelfth that has been issued. It is a new candidate for public favor, but one well deserving support. It advocates peace all the time. Price, $1.00 a year. Published by the Universal Peace Union, 402 Race street, Philadelphia.

The American Angler for June has reached us. It opens with an interesting article on "The game fishes of America," with two cuts representing the Blue fish and the Weak fish, and gives information as to where these fish can be caught and how to catch them. We also notice an article on "The Trout of Northern Michigan," their difference in color, etc. We notice a short note from Seth Green, which would interest our fisherman in Centre county. Published by the Angler Publishing Company, 252 Broadway, New York. Terms, $3.00 a year; single copies, 10 cents.

Harper's Young People, an illustrated weekly magazine for children, is one of the best of its class. Of course, it will always interest the little folks. Published by Harper & Brothers, New York, at $1.50 a year, in advance.

The June number of Our Little Ones, by the Russell Publishing Company, 36 Broomfield St., Boston, Mass., is on our table. This magazine is one that every child would delight to have. It is a thing of beauty and as nice a work to place in the hands our children as we can get. The price is $1.50 a year.

In view of the flurry in oil, the July Century will contain a timely paper, by E. V. Smalley, on the serious and picturesque phases of "Striking Oil." The writer visited the oil regions in company with Mr. Farny, the artist, and will describe the methods and tricks of well-boring, the gigantic monopoly of the pipe-lines, and the general features of the oil trade of the world.

The June number of the City and Country is perhaps the best of any previous issue, being printed on better paper, containing more reading matter, and an exceptionally fine engraving, entitled "Valley of the Babbling Waters, Utah." This occupies one entire page, and is 9x13 inches in size. Its different departments still sparkle with life and interest, while its exposure of swindlers and frauds is still kept up. As an agricultural paper, there is perhaps no better one published, its other features being considered. They offer many valuable premiums to club raisers, and will send to any of our readers, who will mention this paper, a sample copy of City and Country, and special terms to agents, if they desire it. Address Will C. Turner & Co., 217, 219 and 221 N. High St., Columbus, O.

In the Illustrated World Philadelphia has an illustrated weekly equal to the best in the country. It is neatly executed, and its designs are not calculated to offend the most fastidious. It should receive a hearty support from all Pennsylvanians, at least, and will take its place along side of the most popular illustrated papers in the country. Address James Elverson, N. W. Corner Ninth and Spruce streets, Philadelphia. Terms, $3.00 a year.

THE LATEST NEWS.

A Son's Vengeance.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 13.—The Post's Uniontown, Pa., special says: James Nutt, son of the late A. C. Nutt, shot and killed N. L. Dukes, his father's murderer, this evening at half-past 7 o'clock. He shot four times, all the balls taking effect. Dukes died instantly. Dukes had been frequently warned of his danger in remaining in Uniontown and he lately said that he would either stay there or in the cemetery. It is said that he had expressed a fear of Captain Nutt's son. To-day James Nutt was seen practicing with a revolver at his home, and this evening he was standing near the postoffice when Dukes came along. As Dukes was passing he turned his head and noticed young Nutt just as he stepped from the doorway and fired, the shot taking effect in Duke's side. Dukes started to run when Nutt followed and shot again. By this time Dukes was on the postoffice steps when he received another shot and fell inside the door. Nutt followed and fired two more shots into his prostrate body, one taking effect in the neck. Dukes was dead before any one could get to him. The revolver that did the work is the same that Captain Nutt carried on the morning of his death. Young Nutt gave himself up and is now still in jail. He was calm but very pale. Five shots were fired in all, four taking effect. A coroner's jury is now sitting. Excitement is running high.

Young Nutt is not quite 20 years of age and has always been considered a quiet and inoffensive youth. It is said, however, that he has been practicing with a pistol for some time past.

Eleven Days in a Swoon.

READING, June 11.—The case of Miss Annie C. Chain, who has been lying in what is supposed to be a trance for the past eleven days, is exciting considerable interest in the borough of Womelsdorf, a few miles from this city. The young lady is about 22 years of age, is quite pretty, and is a member of a highly respected family. Up to Sunday afternoon, June 3, she was in apparently excellent health and spirits. She suddenly complained of giddiness, and went to her room, where she dropped into a swoon. From that day to this she has not spoken or taken any nourishment. All efforts to revive her have been in vain. An electric battery was applied without any success. She lies perfectly still, and is apparently unconscious of everything about her. During the eleven days of her strange affliction she has considerably fallen away in flesh. Her pulse is very weak, and occasionally the extremities are cold.

A Wife's Presentiment.

READING, June 12.—August Hechler, aged 40, a small farmer living near here, suddenly disappeared from home three weeks ago. The next day it was reported that Hechler had been seen at Lebanon and at Harrisburg. Several explanations of his disappearance were given. The wife believed none of these reports, but said that every night she had a presentiment that her husband's body was at the bottom of a neighboring iron ore mine. She insisted that the old, deserted mine should be searched. To-day a number of the neighbors did as she requested, and, to their amazement, they found the body of Hechler at the bottom of a 60-foot shaft, in fifteen feet of water, with a twenty-pound stone fastened about his neck. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

The Eclipse Observers Coming Home.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 12.—The scientific expedition sent out in March last to observe the total eclipse of the sun at Caroline Island, in the South Pacific, has returned to this city. Prof. Edward S. Holden of the Washburn Observatory of Madison, Wis. who is in charge of the party, reports that the weather on the day of the eclipse was perfect and that the result is a great success. Several good photographs of the corona and spectrum were obtained. The supposed planet Vulcan could not be found. The party arrived here in good health. It will be remembered that this expedition went from New York to Lima, and thence by the United States sloop Hartford to Caroline Island to observe the eclipse of May 6.

Bills Signed by the Governor.

HARRISBUG, June 13.—The governor to-day signed twenty-eight bills, among them the following: To abolish the contract system in prisons and reformatory institutions; providing for the payment to miners for all clean coal mined; for the repudiation of supreme court reports; for the better security and safety of bituminous coal miners; to prohibit political parties from demanding from officials contributions for political purpose; preventing the sale of theatre tickets on streets, and establishing a separate orphan's court in Berks county.

Graduated in Theology.

CHESTER, Pa., June 13.—The fifteenth anniversary of Crozier theological seminary was celebrated to-day. R. C. Clapp, of Long Island: T. B. Crosa, West Virginia; F. C. A. Jones, of New York: T. S. Louis, E. J. McKeener, A. J. Shoemaker, of Pennsylvania, composed the class of graduates, each of whom delivered addresses. The attendance was very large and the exercises interesting. Prof. J. M. Stifler delivered the opening address.

Fire at Havre De Grace.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., June 11.—The large saw mill owned by John Dubois was discovered to be on fire about 5 o'clock this morning. It caught from sparks falling on the roof from the smoke stack. The building in less than an hour was burned to the ground. An immense stock of lumber, including doors, sashes, etc., and all stock on hand have been destroyed. Engines from Baltimore, Port Dubois and Wilmington were telegraphed for. The engine from Port Deposit arrived at 6.50 p. m., and succeeded in saving a considerable amount of shingles and loose lumber in the yard. Engine No. 11 arrived from Baltimore at 8.05. At this writing (10 30 p. m.) they have the fire under control. Mr. Dubois' losses are, as nearly as can be ascertained to night, $225,000, some four million feet of lumber being destroyed. The insurance on the property is supposed to be about $25,000. Sixty or seventy men have been thrown out of employment and it is a terrible loss to the city. Mr. A. B. Comb's large stock of coal on the wharf caught fire and was severely damaged, say from five to eight hundred dollars. Wharves belonging to the Reading Coal and Iron Company are supposed to have sustained a damage of from $2,000 to $3,000.

Attempted Murder.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., June 11.—The city was set wild with excitement this afternoon by the attempted murder of Hon. John E. Lamb, congressman from this district, by Daniel C. Davis, an attorney of this city. Davis was stationed at the entrance of Lamb's office, when the latter approached and saluted him with, "How are you?" "Don't you speak to me," said Davis. "I will speak to you." "I will speak to you. I want to talk to you," said Lamb. "No, you won't," said Davis, rounding out the sentence with epithets, and immediately drawing a revolver and placing it almost immediately against Lamb's chest. The congressman threw up the weapon with one hand and dodged as it was discharged, the ball passing over his shoulder and through a passing wagon, lodging in the driver's foot, inflicting a painful wound. Lamb went into the store next door and Davis was taken in charge by bystanders. The cause of the attempt is attributed to occurrences growing out of a libel suit against the Express in which Davis appears for the prosecution and Lamb for the defense.

Concerning Navy Yards.

CONCORD, N. H., June 10.—Secretary Chandler has received and approved the report of the commission to examine the different navy yards that Mare Island, Norfolk and New York be retained; that Pensacola and New London be closed; that Washington be dropped as a navy yard and be designated as a naval arsenal; that League Island be closed until congress authorizes the carrying out of the original plans to make it a great iron ship building and iron manufacturing yard, and that if this is not agreed upon the yard shall be closed, as it is unsuited for an ordinary yard. Some difference of opinion exists as to the disposition of the Boston and Portsmouth yards. It was recommended that no further expenditures be made for improvements of any kind at the Portsmouth yard. All agree that it would be difficult to overestimate the importance of the Boston yard in time of war in that any proposal to dispose of the property cannot be too strongly condemned.

Movements of General Crook.

TOMBSTONE, A. T., June 11.—An arrival this morning from Cbiricahuas brings information that General Crook has returned from his expedition and is encamped on Silver creek at the south end of the Chiricahuas, where he arrived yesterday afternoon. Sixty miles southeast of this place Saco Chatto, with 230 hostiles, surrendered and were brought in by General Crook, who recrossed the line last Saturday. Among the prisoners were seventy-five bucks. It is believed that General Crook will return and endeavor to capture the warriors. His command is in good fighting trim. There have been no casualties so far.

Prairie Fires.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 11.—A dispatch from Fort Bowie, Arizona, says: "Reports have been received from Major Biddle's command to the effect that the extensive prairie fires which have recently swept across Southern Arizona originated in Mexico and are thought to be the work of Indians returning north. Scouting parties returned to camp on Saturday after being out a week and were met everywhere by fires. Major Biddle's troops will form a junction with the Fourth cavalry under Colonel Forsythe, who has been ordered to Gaudaloupe canon from New Mexico.

The Vatican Pleased with Gladstone.

ROME, June 10.—Mr. Gladstone's recent statement in the House of Commons in regard to the circumstances of Mr. Errington's visits to Rome has given great satisfaction to the Vatican. Mr. Errington is about to leave Rome for England. He will be given an audience by the Pope before he goes.

Pennsylvania Military Academy.

CHESTER, Pa., June 10.—The baccaulaureate address before the corps of cadets of the Pennsylvania military academy was delivered to-day by Rev. S. J. Muchmore, D. D. of Philadelphia.

A Tornado in Iowa.

WEST UNION, June 11.—A tornado struck Brush Creek this afternoon at 3 o'clock, blew one-third of the town away. The loss is $30,000 to $40,000. No lives are reported lost. A school house was also blown over.

WAVERLY, June 11.—A young cyclone this afternoon visited Tripoli, the scene of the exploits of the Barber brothers. It blew down trees and buildings. The machinery warehouse of J. C. Garrett was completely destroyed. Two men in the warehouse escaped with a few bruises. Considerable damage was done to business houses.

Cabinet Meeting.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The cabinet meeting to-day was short and unimportant. Secretaries Chandler and Lincoln and Postmaster General Gresham were absent. After the meeting adjourned the president had a long conference with Secretary Folger in regard to the question of organizing and consolidating internal revenue districts so as to meet the requirements of the law. It is proposed to settle this question as soon as possible and it is expected that an announcement of some perfect plan will be made in a few days.

No Extra Session.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Alexander M. Kennedy, of the central committee on national labor legislation, has received from the president's private secretary a letter in reply to the memorial recently presented by the former asking the president to call an extra session of congress to consider the labor legislation. The president, through his secretary, says that he cannot with a due regard for other interests, comply with the wishes of the petitioners for an extra session of congress at this time.

The Trade Tribunal.

PITTSBURG, June 12.—The trade tribunal appointed to settle the wages of the railroad coal miners announced to-day that a disagreement over the discharge of a miner on account of his connection with the tribunal had been adjusted, and that there is nothing to interfere with an amicable arrangement of the rate of wages. No business was transacted to-day save the examination of statistics received from operators showing the cost of mining.

Sudden Death.

HARRISBURG, June 12.—George Cornelius, a colored messenger in the state treasury, fell dead in the reception chamber of the executive department this morning at half-past 10 o'clock. He was a resident of Philadelphia, aged 55 years, and a well known republican politician, and was generally liked. His death resulted from heart disease and he had been complaining for some time.

Will not be Divided.

READING, Pa., June 13.—At the session of the Episcopal diocese of Central Pennsylvania this morning Rev. S. H. Reynolds offered a resolution that the diocese be divided. The subject was discussed at length and was finally decided by the ministers by a vote of 33 to 32 not to divide. The vote of the laity was dispensed with. An assistant to Bishop Howe will be elected.

Think it Over.

It will only cost you the postage on a letter to write to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1109 Girard street, Philadelphia, and get their opinion of your case, if you are suffering from any form of disease which your physician has failed to cure, as Consumption, Neuralgia, Catarrh, Rheumatism, etc. State it clearly and they will answer promptly, honestly telling you, in view of all the conditions you state, whether they believe Compound Oxygen will do you any good. At the same time they will send you documents containing a history of the discovery of this remarkable substance and a large record of cures which have been made during the last thirteen years, from which you will be able to judge for yourself of its claim upon your confidence.

A Fearful Tornado.

ERIE, Pa., June 12.—A special from Clarendon, Pa., says, a fearful tornado swept over that town tonight demolishing eighty-six large oil rigs and five buildings and deluging the town and causing a great loss of property.

BY THE THOUSAND.—During several years past, Mr. W. E. Clarke, of Providence, R. I., has sold thousands of bottles of his great kidney and liver medicine, Hunt's Remedy. He recommends it to cure the most stubborn of all kidney, bladder, liver, and urinary complaints—even Bright's Disease; and throughout its career, he has kept the motto, "Never known to fail," flying, without once having had occasion to tear it down. Hunt's Remedy is, without question, the best kidney medicine.

Enjoying Themselves.

FORTRESS MONROE, Va., June 12.—One hundred members of the Pennsylvania editorial association arrived here to-day. They are accompanied by their families.

Both Sides Confident.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 10.—The coal operators' and miners' trade tribunal will meet to-morrow to settle the mining rate for the next six months. The miners are confident that 3½ cents per bushel will be awarded them, while the operators are equally certain of a decision in their favor.

Death of Mrs. Jane W. Hale.

On Sunday morning, the 10th inst., after a lingering illness, the spirit of Mrs. Jane W. Hale took its flight. During her last illness she resided at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Stone, of Coatsville, where another daughter, the wife of Rev. Mr. Field, also resides. We hear that Mr. George Hale, her only surviving son, was also with her at the hour of dissolution.

The deceased was the daughter of Hon. Charles Huston, who was at one time President Judge of this district and was afterward appointed associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. On the 6th of May, 1835, she was married to Hon. James P. Hale, who was President Judge of this district and also a representative in Congress from the district composed of Mifflin, Centre, Clinton, Lycoming, Potter and Tioga counties, serving three successive terms in that body. He died on the 6th of April, 1865, and two sons, Charles and James, soon followed their father to the grave. Mrs. Hale was about 68 years of age. Her residence in this place has remained closed during the winter, although she was accustomed to make regular visits to it in the summer. The remains were brought to this place on Tuesday afternoon, the 12th. She was a lady of great excellence of character and her death will be generally lamented by all who knew her.

Adam Hoy, Esq., and Rev. John Hewitt went to Lock Haven to meet the remains. The funeral services were held in the Protestant Episcopal church, of which deceased was a member, on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Mitchell-Irvin Wedding.

The happy event which consummated the union of Mr. William Mitchell, of Scotia, and Miss Annie Irvin, daughter of J. G. Irvin, Esq., of Oak Hall, occurred at 12 o'clock m. on Thursday, June 7, the precise time mentioned on the invitations. One hundred guests thronged the spacious apartments of the handsome residence. When the time arrived ribbons were extended from the entrance to the spot to be occupied by the wedding party. Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Johnston, the latter a sister of the bride, preceded the happy couple into the apartment and stepped aside at the proper place to allow them to pass. The bride looked lovely in a peacock blue silk dress while the dignified and handsome groom was attired in conventional black. Mrs. Johnson wore a superb pink silk.

After the ceremony a fine collation was served which was abundantly enjoyed. The presents were numerous, rich and costly. After the feast was over and congratulations fendered Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, accompanied by Mr. Armstrong and a sister of the bride entered a carriage and came to Bellefonte to take the 5:05 train. A cyclone of rice and old shoes followed them. If peace, prosperity and happiness fail to attend them it will not be for lack of the proper wishes expressed by their friends.

It might be added, by way of postscript, that one couple arrived too late to witness the most interesting part of the ceremony, but as they felt quite badly about it we will not "give them away." Suffice to say, "Better late than never."

A Handsome Mausoleum.

Beautiful in design and costly in material and workmanship is the tomb just erected by Mr. William P Humes over the grave of his wife. It is of dark granite, less than three feet high, enclosed on every side and on top. The slabs of granite which cover the tomb are two in number and slope upward to the centre. On one is the inscription:

Eliza D. Harris,
wife of
William P. Humes, daughter
James P. and M. A. Harris,
February 12, 1837—July 1, 1881.

The other slab is inscribed as follows: "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

The tomb is said to weigh about two tons. Its location is beneath a large tree in the family burial place, just next the grave of Mr. and Mrs. Humes' infant child. There the dead rest with every mark of respect that love and affection can pay to their memories.

—One who was present informs us that the dinner given by Major William F. Reynolds to his guests on Saturday, June 9, was one of the most splendid ever served in Bellefonte and worthy the occasion—his 70th birthday. There were twenty-one covers. Thirteen of the company present were Bellefonte relatives, the remaining eight being visitors from a distance. The dinner hour was 6 o'clock p. m. The discussion of the elaborate menu consumed several hours and the festivities were prolonged late into the night.

Circus Day Rules.

On leaving your house to view the street parade see that your doors are securely locked. It is while the excitement goes on in the street that the thief gets in his work.

If a stranger accosts you on the street, and seeks to engage you in conversation, cut him off short. In all probability he's a confidence man, and "up to snuff."

Don't carry large sums of money with you on the street, for the pickpocket will be numerous and his ways are mysterious.

Keep out of bar-rooms and street jams, particularly if you have valuables upon your person.

In purchasing circus tickets do not offer large bills in payment for same. Some ticket agents are very nearsighted and very apt to mistake an X on a bank note for a figure 1.

Inspect your change carefully before putting it in your pocket, and purchase your tickets only at the ticket wagon.

Drink sparingly of circus lemonade, as a cooling beverage it is n. g., and is made of nobody knows what.

Ladies standing before the monkey cage should avoid stirring up the inmates with their parasols. The average monkey resents this sort of conduct, and often retaliates by pulverizing the parasol and snatching the "kerflummery" from the owner's bonnet.

Never attempt to get off a joke at the expense of the clown. He has been there before, and it will be just like him to say something that will make you feel silly for the rest of the day.

The Water Supply.

Last Wednesday the water was turned off the southern end of town about three hours. It was done in this way: An individual with a sonorous voice pounded at your door and by the time you had concluded that it was neither a tramp nor a robber he shouted, "Provide yourself with water. It will be turned off three hours." Well, some hydrants supply a baker's dozen of families and run at best so small a stream as to require several moments to fill an ordinary bucket. The scene that ensued can be imagined. Women and men hastened to that one solitary hydrant armed with buckets of glistening tin or solemn looking cedar. First come, first served, and five or ten minutes passed ere the last in the line secured even a bucketful. There are families who consume several bucketfuls in three hours; but by the time they returned to the attack the water had been turned off. Now, the remedy for this is plain. When the water is to be turned off in any part of town notice should be given in the Daily News and all the consumers of water can be prepared. The present mode of procedure is ridiculous.

Death Caused by a Slight Scratch.

Mr. Jacob Good, of Mifflin township, Lycoming county, met his death a few days ago in a way that is at once sad and curious. While on his way to visit a neighbor, he met a cow along the road, that was choking on some substance that had lodged in her throat. It became apparent at once to Mr. Good that if some relief was not at once given to the animal, death would ensue. Mr. Good then shoved his hand down the animal's throat and forced the obstruction through, and in so doing the back of of his hand was slightly scratched, by coming in contact with the cow's grinders. No attention was paid to this at the time, but during the night the hand began to swell, the inflammation gradually extending up the arm. Dr. Coates, of Salladesburg, was called and prescribed for Mr. Good, but to no avail, as the inflammation finally extended to the heart, causing death.

—The Holidaysburg correspondent of the Altoona Tribune relates that Mrs. Martha King, who says she is 75 years of age, arrived in that place on Monday, June 11, and applied for lodging at the jail. She is reported to have traveled all the way from Holton, a small village in Maine. Most of the journey was made on foot. Two sons reside in Leechburg, Pa., who sent her $100. But her husband died and she had only $10 left after paying funeral expenses. Then she started on the journey to visit her sons. Occasionally kind persons would give her enough money to ride a short distance but she had walked most of the way. On Tuesday morning when she left Hollidaysburg to cross the Allegheny mountains she had only 35 cents in money and a pie.

—A surprisingly large sum of money was realized by the Milesburg Band at their festival on Friday and Saturday evenings, the 8th and 9th of June. The net proceeds on Friday night exceeded $50 and on Saturday night it reached almost $200, making about $250 in all. This was so much beyond their expectations as to deserve congratulations.

The Electric Light Company.

No difficulty has been met in organizing an electric light company in Bellefonte. The matter has been discussed for some time by business men, and has now been brought to a successful culmination. Ex Senator C. T. Alexander is perhaps connected most prominently in the scheme. The amount of stock subscribed is $10,000 which is taken by twelve separate individuals. We have not been able to procure all their names, but among them are such gentlemen as Senator C. T. Alexander, C. M. Bower, Esq. L. T. Munson, Hon. D. G. Bush and Harry Landis. The stock can be increased at any time.

Base Ball at Philipsburg.

Some interest has been expressed regarding the result of the game on Tuesday, the 12th, between the Tyrone and Philipsburgh nines played at the latter place. We are able to give the result. The game was sharply contested and resulted in favor of Philipsburg by a score of 7 to 6. The Tyrone nine have been desirous to play a Bellefonte nine and considering the result of the game in question it might be advisable to test the strength of the respective organizations—that is, if Bellefonte really has a genuine base ball nine, regarding which some uncertainty seems to exist.

Two Deaths Near Millheim.

The great harvester, Death, has been busily employed in the vicinity of Millheim during the past week. Mr. William Miller, aged 38 years and 7 months, died on Friday, June 8, of a complication of diseases. The funeral occurred on Sunday. Deceased leaves a wife but no children. His death will be universally regretted.

A death also occurred near Millheim on Wednesday, June 6. Mr. John Dutweiler, who was over was 80 years of age, breathed his last after a life well and honorably spent. He was laid to rest with appropriate and solemn services on Saturday, the 9th.

—The business department of the Centre Democrat has been moved into the front room of building in which the office is located. Under the influence of fresh paint and paper and new furniture the apartment has been transformed into quite a pleasant place in which to receive callers, and the pretty surroundings will enable the average Democratic editorial writer to smoothe over the glaring inconsistencies of the party's history as well as to indulge in some rosy-tinted expectations in regard to its future.

—The next annual session of the Pennsylvania State Teachers' Association will be held at Williamsport, July 10, 11, 12 (Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday). A convention of the superintendents of the State has been called to meet at the same time and place. The rates at hotels and on railroads have been reduced, and no doubt this will be the largest meeting of educators ever held in the State. Any person desiring information can obtain the same by addressing Henry Houck, Harrisburg, Pa., who is chairman of the executive committee.

—The devotions of a certain person were disturbed on a recent Sunday by a pretty picture visible through the open church window. A gentleman and lady were sitting beneath a grape arbor apparently deeply engrossed in each other. The sun grew warmer and they arose to enter the mansion. That was the last seen of them, but it would be interesting to know if anything stronger than friendship will grow out of that Sunday morning scene.

—Chief Burgess Fleming has issued a proclamation prohibiting the firing of fire-crackers, torpedoes or other explosives, in accordance with an ordinance so made and provided. This is commendable, at least until the Fourth of July, on which occasion we hope an exception will be made and noisy patriotism will be given free vent.

—One of the finest farms in this vicinity is the one owned by Judge John Irvin, of this place. It is located near Jacksonville. The present occupant, Mr. John Butler, has lived on the farm thirteen years. Among the improvements which he is now making on the handsome property is the embellishment of the exterior of the large barn with fresh paint.

—Mr. John Powers has recently added a new and very rare specimen to his ornithological collection. The new arrival is a superb South American cardinal-bird, so called from the color of the high, pointed crest on its head. Its musical notes are loud and melodious.

—Bellefonte is to have the electric light, the company having already been organized. In this enterprise she is ahead of many more pretentious towns.

—The Altoona base ball nine have recently been scoring a few victories.

The Circus Parade.

A larger number of people than assembled in town on Thursday perhaps were never drawn together on any similar occasion in this vicinity. They thronged every street and looked from every open window.

About 11 o'clock the street parade put in appearance on West High street. It included the usual features. Two bands of music riding in what are grandly called "chariots;" a long line of cages supposed to contain wonderful beasts, birds and reptiles; the elephant, "Empress," finely caparisoned and bearing a fair lady and two attendants; a vehicle shaped like a fish drawn by liliputian ponies; several of the cages containing the usual number of odd looking figures which indulged in ludicrous movements for the amusement of the multitude. The horses were generally good; the cages and other paraphernalia presented an old and dingy appearance. The spectacle proved as entertaining as usual.

Fire Companies Coming.

The fire organizations that have already accepted the invitation to participate in the Fourth of July picnic in this place are three from Huntingdon, viz: Nos. 1 and 2 and the Hook and Ladder Company; a representation of twenty-five members of the Vigilant company of Altoona and the Friendship company of Tyrone. The Huntingdon companies will bring a band with them, as will also the visitors from Altoona. As several invitations are still out, answers not having yet been received, it is probable that there will be other acceptances and the fire laddies here will have more guests than they originally bargained for. But a hospitality which has never been known to fail will be extended to them.

Bank Check Stamps.

After July 1st the stamp on all bank checks will be abolished. In view of this fact it is the desire of bankers to have depositors send to their respective banks all unused bank checks, as soon as possible after the 1st proximo, in order that they may be forwarded for redemption at one time, thus saving express charges and the annoyance of sending in straggling lots. The amount paid by the Government will be allowed, less the express charges, and check books without stamps will be furnished on application.

—The car works have not yet been sold, nor have the damages to the water power by the late flood been repaired. Until Manager Tiffin returns the property will remain as at present.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which sulphur, sugar of lead, and nitrate of silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggists for it. Each bottle is warranted. Smith, Kline & Co., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and Hall & Ruckel, New York. 14 24 1y

—The killing of Dukes by the son of the man whom he so cruelly murdered furnished one of the chief topics of conversation on the street last Thursday morning.

—To see the Italians dance Thursday was equal to a half-dozen circuses. An old man played the tambourine and another, not quite so aged, performed on the bagpipes, which closely resembled a stuffed pig-skin. Two men danced at one time and moved with activity and grace considering the heavy boots which they wore. They evidently enjoyed the amusement.

—Our valued friend, Constable W. H. Wyke, of Half Moon township, brought to our office from the property owned by the Tow Hill Ore Mines a splendid specimen of iron ore. The alloy shows a very high proportion of iron and we are amazed to learn that the proprietors ship away a hundred tons of this ore daily, the shipments being limited only by the orders received and the carrying facilities.

THE WEAVER-HARRIS WEDDING

The Very Happy Event that took place on Thursday at the Residence of John P. Harris, Esq.

Thursday was a perfect day. At 4 o'clock p. m. a very large number of people from this place, Tyrone, Clearfield, Altoona, Huntingdon, Williamsport, Lock Haven, Philadelphia and other places filled the pleasant apartments of the residence of our townsman, John P. Harris, cashier of the First National Bank, to witness the nuptial ceremony between his eldest daughter, Miss Nannie Harris, and Mr. A. B. Weaver, a prosperous young lumberman of Clearfield.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. William Laurie, pastor of the Bellefonte Presbyterian church, assisted by Rev. J. J. Francis, of Birmingham. The bride and groom, preceded by two attendants, Messrs. R. H. Fay, of Altoona, and A. B. Reed, of Clearfield, advanced into the west parlor, Miss Jennie Reynolds playing the wedding march. The ceremony was beautiful and at its conclusion sincere and profuse congratulations followed and all went merry as a marriage bell.

At 5 o'clock the reception commenced, to which a large number of invitations had been issued. It was prolonged until 8 o'clock, during which time the residence was thronged with guests. The toilets of the ladies were very elegant, the spacious rooms presenting a scene which challenges description.

Mr. and Mrs. Weaver departed on the evening train for Atlantic City, thence they will go to Chicago, then by way of the great lakes to Boston, returning in about six weeks to Clearfield where we hope it can be said of them, as of the hero and heroine of a fairy romance, "They lived happily ever after."

Among the guests from a distance who were present were Mrs. Charles Stewart and son, Miss Lizzie Logan, Dr. W. F. Logan, Colonel Fred E. Embick and Mrs. Guly White, of Williamsport; Mr. Horace Kapp and sister of Northumberland; Mr. James Harris, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Bigler, widow of ex-Governor Bigler, Mr. E. A. Bigler, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Gordon, Mrs. Frank Fielding. Mr. A. B. Reed, P. F. Weaver and wife, F. B. Reed and wife, Mr. George Weaver and wife, Mr. Paul Weaver and wife and Mr. George Moore, of Clearfield; A. G. Morris, wife and daughter, of Tyrone; Mrs. Johnson, of Hollidaysburg; Mr. Alexander Scott, of Freeport; Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, of Berwick; Honorable R. Bruce Petrikin and wife, of Huntingdon; General McCoy and son, of Tyrone.

An unusually choice and elegant collection of presents was received, including oil paintings and steel engravings, beautiful articles of furniture, 2 solid silver services (one inlaid with gold), eight dozen solid silver spoons, a jewel case, a costly imported lamp, two ornamental clocks, a beautiful rosewood table, presented by six young men of Bellefonte and other articles of ornament and virtu, the mere mention of which would be almost impossible. They were arranged in the enclosure within the bay window on the second floor and were admired by all who had an opportunity of inspecting them. From beginning to end the wedding was a most happy affair, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

How the Italians Live.

From the L. H. Express: The Italian Railroad laborers and their mode of life is frequently commented on by Americans and it is incomprehensible to most people how they work so hard and eat so little. In the first place they pay no regard to cleanliness, and a dozen men will occupy quarters large enough for about two persons. They sleep all huddled together on a bed or in smalll bunks and do most of their cooking in the open air in a tin bucket, or pan. In conversation with a foreman of one of the jobs on the new railroad he said to us that an Italian will shovel dirt all morning and sit down at noon and make his meal on bread and what might be termed fried dough. The latter is made of flour and water, rolled thin, and cut in thin strips like "noodles" and fried in a little lard. Meat is seldom ever eaten, more than once a day, and then in the evening or morning. They consume a great deal of maccaroni which is generally eaten for breakfast or supper, and their bread is a mixture of wheat and rye flour. What an Italian consumes in a day when doing hard manual labor would not begin to satisfy an Irishman or American in idleness, and how the former sustain life is a mystery.

—Rain falls freely, every day bringing shower after shower in quick succession. People should be duly grateful for such a season, for dry weather after the prolonged drought of last year and the late Spring would have been disastrous.

Ice Cream for Two.

The verdant youth who scribbles for the L. H. Journal, on Thursday, made the following statement which, while it may be true, is so awkwardly constructed as to render its meaning uncertain:

A Bellefonte man worth $90,000 when he goes for ice cream with his wife buys one plate with one spoon, and this is to be eaten between them.

There are so many men in Bellefonte worth $90,000 that the scribe was safe in designating the man in this manner—doubtless, he refers to one of the Bellefonte editors. Again, Bellefonte men go for ice cream with their wives; in Lock Haven, it is probable that the men go with some other persons wives. The scribe is doubtless correct when he states that the man orders "one plate with one spoon." The Lock Haven man, we suppose, is uncivilized enough to order one plate with two spoons or two plates with one spoon. Naturally, the Lock Haven man has no idea of the eternal fitness of things, he has has been known to order one plate with fifty spoons and then like B. F. Butler, pocket forty-nine of them, "This is to be eaten between them," exclaims the perspicuous scribe. What is? The plate, the spoon, or the ice cream? If you mean the latter, we answer affirmatively. Not only between them but also by them. Are men and their wives accustomed to separate and sit in opposite ends of the room in Lock Haven ice cream saloons? If so we can learn them several points in good manners. In Bellefonte they sit opposite each other and eat their ice cream between them. That Journal makes use of very peculiar assertions, doesn't it?

Commencement at Hollidaysburg.

From the Altoona Tribune we learn that the commencement and other closing exercises of the Hollidaysburg Ladies Seminary was the chief event of interest in the latter place last week,

The exercises began on Sunday evening, June 10, with the baccalaureate sermon preached by Rev. D. H. Barron, D. D. On Monday night the musical department rendered a closing concert which was largely attended. The feature of the performance was a violin solo by Miss Nettie Plack. The promenade concert and art exhibition on Tuesday night drew a vast throng of delighted visitors. The seminary grounds were illuminated with scores of Japanese lanterns of various colors, which presented an attractive appearance.

Paintings, the productions of the pupils, were displayed in the drawing rooms and are said to have surpassed any similar exhibitions in the past. The commencement exercises took place on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock in the Presbyterian church. They consisted of the rendition of musical selections and an oration by Rev. D. W. Poor, D. D., of Philadelphia. The graduates had previously prepared essays which were read before the Faculty, in private, and they were excused from the duty of delivering them publicly. Eleven young ladies received diplomas.

—Two citizens of Locust Grove, Huston township, came to Bellefonte on Thursday. They never attended a circus, but it happened that each one was accompanied by his little girl, and as the children requested to be taken to the afternoon entertainment the gentlemen yielded to their request. After the entertainment they expected to return to their homes on the 5.05 train, but as it was not yet due they went up town, leaving the children in care of a lady at the depot. They returned in time but could not find their children. They entered the train, thinking that the children had also gone in unnoticed. The train moved on its way but the little ones were not yet visible. Both John and George were very much frightened. They hesitated to reveal the truth to their wives, but at last it had to come out, and there was mourning in those two households. A son of one of the gentlemen returned on the evening train and found the little girls alive, well and happy. They, with their companion, had also started out for a walk, and failed to return in time.

—From the Altoona Tribune: Lock Haven and Bellefonte papers say the Vigilant fire company will participate in the Fourth of July parade to be held in each of these places. It may seem strange to have the companies booked for both places, but it will bear an explanation. The company have accepted both invitations conditionally. That is the members of the company who wish to go to Lock Haven can go as representatives of the company, and those who prefer going to Bellefonte will have the same privilege, It is likely a large delegation will go to both places. Neither party, however, will take a band along.

Safety from Fire.

An important bill for safety in case of persons employed in factories and other buildings needing fire escapes has been signed by the Governor, it having passed both branches of the Legislature. The bill prescribes that all buildings needing fire escapes shall, in addition, have securely fastened to six window heads chains ten feet long, to which shall be attached thick ropes of sufficient length to reach to the ground. The ropes are to be placed on the window sills, and must be accessible to anybody in the building. Hotels must provide every room above the second story with such chains and ropes. Failure to comply with these regulations renders the offender liable to a fine of $300, and to damages arising from loss of life or limb in case of fire. The third section of the act prescribes that "tenants or lessees of any building used for the purpose of manufacturing, hotel, boarding house, seminary, or other building which is required by law to have fire escapes attached, and to which such fire escapes have not been erected, after giving the landlord or his agent thirty days' notice to erect suitable fire escapes, and on his refusal or neglect to erect the same within the time specified in said notice, may erect and maintain suitable and legal fire escapes, and collect the cost and maintenance from the landlord or his agent in an action the same as for debt, or may set off the cost thereof against rent then due or thereafter coming due."

—The commencement exercises will begin at State College on Sunday, the 24th instant, and continue until the 29th. A much more elaborate time is anticipated than has been the custom in the past. Governor Pattison will probably be present with a few members of his staff. The College Hall, which has already been demonstrated to be insufficient to meet the demands of former commencements, will not be used, but instead a large enclosure will be erected in which the various exercises will be held. The students in attendance this year, although not very large in numbers, are unusually intelligent and will do honor to the institution. Next year, it is expected, the number of students will be much larger. This certainly should be the case, as State College offers advantages toward securing an education to be found in no other College in the State.

Prospective Improvements in Snow Shoe.

Mr. William Grauer, of the firm of Grauer & Co., whose large mercantile establishment in Snow Shoe was recently entirely destroyed by fire, established temporary headquarters in 'Squire Haines' auction rooms immediately after that event and was soon industriously engaged in selling goods. The firm is constantly receiving new goods and a temporary structure for their reception is about completed in which they will carry on business until more permanent and commodious store rooms are erected.

It is said that Mr. James L. Somerville, of Bellefonte, will soon erect a large building for businesss purposes on the site of his property which was recently burned.

—At the recent sessions of the convention of the Central Pennsylvania Diocese of the Episcopal church, at Reading, the proposal for a division of the diocese was defeated by one vote. Rev. John Hewitt, of this place, was unable to be present when the vote was taken, but had he been able to cast his vote a tie would have been the result, as he favors division. The request of Bishop Howe for an assistant bishop was not granted, but in lieu of that $1500 per annum extra was voted to him to enable him to secure whatever assistance he may desire.

Boys' Branch Picnic.

Monday was the time appointed for the Boys' Branch picnic and quite a number of the members of that organization assembled at the Y. M. C. A. rooms that morning anxious to proceed to the picnic grounds at Snow Shoe Intersection, but the rain eventually prevented the day's pleasure and the sport was postponed until Tuesday. The programme of exercises was well calculated to delight the juveniles. It was about as follows:

Meet at the rooms,	7 a. m.
Arrive at grounds,	8 a. m.
Base ball game,	9 a. m.
Dinner preceded by Bible reading,	11 a. m.
Sack races,	1 p. m.

Velocipede races,	3 p. m.
Balloon assencion,	4 p. m.
Leave for room,	4.30 p.m.

After spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Hannam, in Catawissa she will go to New York State. Miss Keyser's sister will fill her place while absent.

—A dispatch to the Philadelphia Times in regard to the crop prospects of this county represents them in the following glowing colors:

BELLEFONTE, June 15.—Crops generally in Centre county look fine; in fact were never better at this season, with perhaps the exception of corn, which is a little backward on account of numerous heavy rains, much of it having to be replanted. The wheat, rye, hay, oats and potato crops will be immense, from present appearances. Gardens are doing splendidly and we are having magnificent weather. Nittany and Penn's Valleys are a second Eden, and Bald Eagle Valley is rich with future prospects for the husbandman. Colonel James Pope, the big Snow Shoe coal operator, reports all crops in his section excellent.

In the evening there will be a balloon ascension and fire works.

E. W. BARRY, Commander.
R. V. BUTLER, Ad'j't.

—Decidedly the most enjoyable hop that ever took place in the Bush House occurred Thursday evening, the participants being the guests from a distance who were in town to attend the Weaver-Harris wedding, together with a few people from Bellefonte. A more select and enjoyable company never graced the parlors of the hotel. Music of a superior description was rendered by an orchestra from the Repasz Band, Williamsport. The hours passed merrily away and made a fitting conclusion to the day's enjoyment.

—Our young friend, Mr. J. H. Orbison, graduated from Princeton Seminary a few weeks ago and was licensed to preach by the Presbytery that met in Unionville on the 12th of June. He will spend part of the next few months preaching in Snow Shoe and will then study medicine, his aim being to equip himself thoroughly for missionary work in India, where his parents labored in the same noble cause. We are informed that he will preach in the Presbyterian church, this place, next Sunday.

—Mr. Lyman Gerberich, of Mansfield, Ohio, is the guest of his cousin, Mr. C. T. Gerberich, of this place. The same gentleman spent a few days in town last summer and was so much pleased with his brief experience that he concluded to return. He is a very skillful musician, the violin being his favorite instrument. His presence and performances give much pleasure to the local musicians who visit at Mr. Gerberich's residence.
